PRESS GREAT AID TO NEEDED REFORM

President Talks to Members of the National Editorial Association at Jamestown Fair

ALSO MAKES A SPEECH TO GEORGIANS

Norfolk, Va., June 10.—President Roosevelt today delivered two notable addresses at the Jamestown exposition. One was on the occasion of the dedication of the Georgia state building, and the other was to the National Editorial association.

President Roosevelt discussed the influence of the press and some of the great problems of government now specially alive, undertaking to show what had been done in the direction of reforms and what was needed in law to carry some of these reforms forward.

Address to the Editors.

In addressing the National Editorial association President Roosevelt spoke as follows:

It is of course a mere truism to say that no other body of our countrymen wield as extensive an influence as those who write for the daily press and for the periodicals. It is also a truism to say that such power implies the gravest responsibility, and the man exercising it should hold himself accountable, and should be held by others accountable, precisely as if he occupied any other position of public trust. I do not intend to dwell upon your duties today, however, save that I shall permit myself to point out one matter where it seems to me that the need of our people is vital. It is essential that the man in public life and the man who writes in the public press shall both of them, if they are really good servants of the people, be prompt to assail wrongdoing and wickedness. By thus assailing wrongdoing and wickedness, there are two conditions to be fulfilled, because if unfulfilled, harm and not good will result. In the first place, be sure of your facts and avoid everything like hysteria or exaggeration; for to assail a decent man for something of which he is innocent is to give aid and comfort to every scoundrel, while indulgence in hysterical exaggeration serves to weaken, not strengthen, the statement of truth. In the second place, be sure that you base your judgment on conduct and not on the social or economic position of the individual with whom you are dealing. There are good and bad men in every walk of life, and their being good or bad does not depend upon whether they have or do not have large bank accounts.

Elemental Fact Ignored.

Yet this elemental fact, this fact which we all accept as self-evident, when we think each of us of the people whom he himself knows in his business and social relations, is often completely ignored by certain public men and certain public writers. The men who thus ignore it and who attack wickedness only when found in a particular class are always unsafe, and are sometimes very dangerous leaders. Distrust equally the man who is never able to discover any vices of rich men to attack and the man who confines himself to attacking sins and shortcomings of rich men. It is a sure sign of moral and mental dishonesty in any man if in his public assaults upon iniquity he is never able to see any iniquity save that of a particular class; and this whether he

IT REALLY IS THE EARTH'S GREATEST

Barnum and Bailey Aggregation Has Its Tents Spread in Fort Wayne and the Crowd is There

PERFORMANCE AND ZOO UP TO CLAIMS

There is a real circus upon the new and splendid show grounds at Griswold avenue. Imagine a maze of bespangled human forms whirling through the air, twisting and turning on a network of ropes and bars. Picture a series of sawdust rings planted in an oval surrounded by men, women and children with faces drawn in tense expression at times and again relaxed into smiles that reflect a tickled sense of humor. Conjure in your mind the sight of an animated object suddenly hurled through space, leaping a chasm and landing again on the firmament. Add to this the picture of horses, dogs, elephants, donkeys and other animals performing feats of skill and daring, interspersing all with a background of grotesque figures engaged in curious occupations, and you have the Barnum & Bailey circus. It was a sight such as this which was disclosed to the thousands which packed the huge tent this afternoon. It set the nerves of children tingling and stirred up reminiscences in the breasts of their elders that made heavy footsteps a bit more elastic and sent a sparkle to the eye.

"The Greatest" Up to the Mark.

With new trappings and trimmings an endless succession of tricks and new "stunts" to please the children and fire the marrow of the jaded individual who has seen it all, the Barnum & Bailey circus lives up to its trademark fully. What might be termed familiar acts are the best of their kind and in addition are features bearing the stamp of newness and originality. One of the most thrilling of the new thrillers is the ski-jumping feat of Captain Howelsen, a Norwegian, who gained renown for his skill in that sport in his native country. The gallant captain's snow-covered mountain is a runway waxed and made slippery for his performance. The runway is about one hundred and fifty feet long and extends at an angle of forty-five degrees from the roof of the tent to a point within a few feet from the ground. Near the bottom it takes a sudden rise.

Down this slippery incline Captain Howelsen, amid a breathless stillness broken only by the shivering music of the band, glides on his long wooden skees at lightning speed. Up the rise at the bottom of the runway he shoots like an arrow and sails through the air for a distance of fifty feet, alighting gracefully on a landing place built to receive him. His rapid flight down the runway and leap over the chasm is a spectacular act which is distinctly a splendid thriller of the circus.

The Climax of the Show.

"L'Auto Bolide, the Dip of Death," which comes as the grand climax to the show, is another thriller. Described by the press agent this act is a "delightfully daring dash, death-defying automobile flight and somersault that reaches the topmost limit of daring and devilish endeavor." Miss Isabella Butler is the performer and the act consists of a ride down the outside of a precipitous circle and then a somersault leap through the air to a receiving platform.

Interspersing these features there is an array of acrobatic, juggling, tight-rope walking and other feats of all characters that preserve the old-time atmosphere of the circus. There are, for example, the Novellos, a troupe of trained athletes and animals who present novelties in this line that have never before been seen in a circus. Then there is the aerial troupe of acrobats in their bespangled costumes who whirl about in a network of trapezes with the agility of monkeys. There are athletic men and women going through gyrations in various parts of the oval and there are the rings which present a continually animated picture.

Old-Time Atmosphere Maintained.

Aside from the introduction of a few modern performances, all the old-time atmosphere of the circus has been maintained. There is more glitter of spangles than is usual in the latter day show, and the costumes consist more of tights and materials such as the pioneers in circuses wore. The clowns are of the old type and new type, great in number and bombastic in their fun. To their ranks has been made a notable addition this year in "Silvers" Oakley and "Spader" Johnson, who are permitted to roam at will about the oval and amuse the audience with their collection of capers.

Between elephants, clowns, leaping hounds, educated horses, aerial acrobats, jugglers and many other performers the show presents an animated picture from beginning to end. A half dozen sets of eyes would be necessary to keep track of the moving panorama in detail. To take in all the spectator is forced to refrain from concentrating his attention on one part of the oval, and the man who constantly shifts his gaze is the one who can best tell others of the circus after it is over.

All of It Is There.

Horse racing, dashing contests between chariots, dogs which all but talk, elephants and horses which perform tricks new to the circus-going public, acrobats who cling by teeth and toes sixty feet above the net, costumes which are marvels of glittering beauty and circus riders who do toe dances on galloping steeds—these and a thousand and one other things go to make up a circus performance of rare excellence. The menagerie is most comprehensive, presenting many rare types including a herd of three giraffes, bi-horned rhinoceros, Kadiack bear and a herd of twenty-four elephants.

Tonight's performance begins promptly at 8 o'clock. The "Dip of Death" is among the first numbers on the evening program, so don't delay in going. This is made necessary in order that the heavy and cumbersome apparatus may be early removed. You can't afford to miss this circus.

When Circus Came to Town.

A pretty large proportion of Fort Wayne's population has enjoyed a generous glimpse of circus life aside from that rendered beneath the big tents during the progress of the regular performances, and that it was as genuinely enjoyed as the advertised features cannot be doubted. This was the arrival of the circus

PRESIDENT CENTER OF GALA TIME AT JAMESTOWN

Great Naval Review Made Principal Fete of Georgia Day.

Exposition Grounds, Norfolk, Va., June 10.—Brought back to the Jamestown exposition by the formal opening of Bulloch hall, the ancestral home of his mother at Roswell, Ga., and reproduced here as the Georgia state building, President Roosevelt today was for the second time the central figure of an attractive exposition program.

Outside of the features arranged in connection with the celebration of Georgia day, the military and naval spectacle was not greatly dissimilar to that which marked the visit of the president when the exposition was thrown open April 26. He will be the guest of the exposition about nine hours, arriving with a special party including Mrs. Roosevelt on the Mayflower at 8:20 a. m. The president was landed at the exposition grounds at 11 o'clock. He made a speech as part of the Georgia day exercises in the forenoon and another at the convention of the National Editorial association in the auditorium this afternoon. He reviewed the parade of the military and navy forces, visited the negro exhibit, participated in the presentation of a silver service by the state of Georgia to the battleship named for her, attended a reception given at the Georgia building by Georgians alone in honor of himself and Mrs. Roosevelt and visited informally the New York state building. He will depart for Washington about 5 o'clock.

Roosevelt Weather.

The weather provided another Roosevelt day. There were just enough clouds to break the heat of the sun and yet leave the day bright and clear. From early morning every street car and boat arriving at the exposition grounds deposited hundreds of passengers at the gates.

Every part of the exposition grounds except the "war path" was covered by the president in his strenuous day. The New York building and the Georgia building and the negro exhibit are situated at extreme opposite ends of the grounds and the reviewing stands and the auditorium, where the speeches were made, are in about the center of the grounds. The reservation was thronged with the greatest attendance since the opening of the exposition and the president was given a reception fully as enthusiastic as that accorded him on the occasion of his first visit.

Noted Company Reviews Fleet.

It was a distinguished party that reviewed the assembled war vessels from the Mayflower. Immediately on the arrival of that vessel the party of Secretary of the Navy Metcalf was landed from the Dolphin. The others to join the president were Governor Terrell, of Georgia, and W. N. Mitchell, of the Georgia state commission. Passing over the same course as when he visited the exposition on the opening day, the president reviewed the fleets of seven nations, six in addition to the United States. The sea fighters were in gala attire, the flags of the different countries represented making a striking picture.

As the Mayflower steamed down the long column of vessels, each in turn greeted the president, who occupied the bridge of his trim yacht, with a salute of twenty-one guns. The foreign vessels had the positions of

SOME STIR IN JAPAN OVER AFFAIRS IN AMERICA

Attempt to Arouse Feeling Against the United States.

Toledo, June 10.—(Afternoon.)—The council of the progressives at a meeting today adopted a resolution, the substance of which was as follows:

"The anti-Japanese feeling upon the Pacific coast of the United States, especially in San Francisco, culminated in an assault upon Japanese trading places last month, constituting a most flagrant violation of the rights guaranteed by the treaty concluded upon an equal footing between the two nations.

"The anti-Japanese acts are not of a temporary nature and the federal government at Washington must be held responsible for its failure to prevent such outrages.

"The attitude of our government towards that in Washington has so far been unsatisfactory to the nation and it is necessary that proper steps should be taken by our government in order to maintain the national dignity and permanently insure the safety of the rights and property of our compatriots in America."

RIDICULES CONSPIRACY TALE.

Seattle Japanese Characterizes Story as a Falsehood.

Seattle, Wash., June 10.—Charles Takahashi, vice president of the Oriental Trading company of this city, who went to Washington as the representative of the Japanese on the Pacific coast to confer with Ambassador Aoki on the proposed mutual inclusion treaty yesterday, said regarding the dispatch reporting the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the present administration of Japan.

"The writer of the Washington dispatch begins with an amusing political blunder and ends with falsehood. He seems to have interpreted a suggestion as a complaint. The progressives in Japan and the Japanese on the Pacific northwest have nothing in common. The progressive party is badly demoralized. Its leader, Count Okuma, recently resigned the leadership. The party practically is without a leader.

"It is untrue that Yamaoka went to Japan to confer with the anti-administration leaders nor is he the personal representative of Okuma on this coast. He has always fought Okuma's party and supported premier Saionji. He was the editor of Saionji's personal organ.

"An alliance between the progressives and the Japanese of the Pacific northwest is impossible. The latter are in sympathy with the present administration in Japan and with Viscount Aoka continued as ambassador to the United States. We feel that he is the best informed man on the Japanese question in the United States who is now in the service of our government. Personally I feel that it would be a severe blow to our interests to have Viscount Aoki recalled.

"In conclusion, I want to make clear the following facts, in refutation of the story of conspiracy contained in the Washington dispatch:

First, there is no conspiracy; second, there cannot possibly be any alliance between the Japanese of the Pacific northwest and the progressive party in Japan, for the reason that our sympathies and support in the west have always been with the present

HARRY ORCHARD'S HEART IS CHANGED

Author of Many Murders and Other Crimes Has Professed Religion Since He Was Jailed

EXPLAINS WHY HE IS TELLING THE TRUTH

Boise, Idaho, June 10.—The defenders of William D. Haywood, continuing their cross-examination of Harry Orchard, are making a strong attempt to show the Independence station outrage instead of being procured by the Western Federation of Miners, was a "plan" of the enemies of the federation intended to be comparatively harmless and converted by mischance into a great tragedy. Orchard had testified that he and Adams pulled the trigger of the mine before the train reached the station and the defense seeks to make it appear that it was planned to blow up the station, not only before the train arrived, but before the non-union men working in the neighborhood came down to the train.

Orchard, in explanation of his act in setting off the mine before the train arrived, swore that Sherman Parker, of the Western Federation of Miners, had a friend on the train—one Bush who had previously been a friend to the witness in the train-wrecking case—and asked that care be taken not to injure him. Orchard also denied that the mine owners or the railroad detectives had planned the explosion.

Moyer and Haywood Innocent.

The defense had previously shown that as far as the witness knew Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone had nothing to do with the Vindicator plot, and that Moyer and Haywood had nothing to do with planning the murder of Lyte Gregory.

Orchard said he believed that they were parties to both plans, but he could not, of his own knowledge, say that they were.

The defense made attempts to show that Orchard is testifying under the coaching and control of Detective McParland, but this the witness denied with spirit, saying McParland and Attorney Hawley had cautioned him to tell nothing but the truth.

In the course of the cross-examination Orchard admitted he had burned his cheese factory, near Brighton, in Canada, and collected $600 insurance.

ADAMS IS NOW IN BOISE.

Important Witness Expected to Refuse to Testify.

Boise, Idaho, June 10.—Harry Orchard commenced his fifth day's grilling on the witness stand in the Haywood murder trial today. The tragedies of two years of his life, prior to the time the gates of the Idaho penitentiary closed upon him have yet to be rehearsed in detail. If Orchard goes through the cross examination today with as little confusion in his statements as he has exhibited in the last two days, it will have been, perhaps, the most remarkable exhibition ever given on a witness stand.

Counsel for the defense themselves do not hesitate to pronounce Orchard the most difficult proposition they have ever been called upon to face in the course of their experiences as lawyers.

Practically they have given up hope of being able to shake the man's testimony so far as material points are concerned and they say that the present examination is made, not for the purpose of confusing Orchard, but to place before the jury statements which they will contradict in detail by their own witnesses.

Steve Adams Is There.

Steve Adams, the alleged associate of Harry Orchard in some of his crimes, reached Boise today in charge of a deputy. Adams was accompanied by his attorney, John Worms, of Wallache, Shoshone county. It is believed that Adams has made up his mind to refuse to testify when he is placed on the stand.

Adams was placed in a cell in the county jail adjoining that occupied by Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone.

Orchard Corrects Statements.

Immediately upon going on the stand at 9:35 this morning Orchard asked for permission to correct two statements made by him on Saturday, one to the effect that Bill Easterly had made bombs with "Pettibone dope" with him at Cripple Creek and the other that he and Steve Adams had carried their shotguns in holsters when they were stalking Governor Peabody. He said Billy Ackerman and not Bill Easterly made the experiments with him and that he and Adams did not carry their guns in holsters.

Attorney Richardson brought out the fact that Orchard was in conference with Detective McParland this morning and Attorney Hawley yesterday, and that each morning before appearing on the stand he visits Hawley's office, but the witness denied that he corrected his testimony on any suggestion from either Hawley or McParland. He said he told Hawley he had made a mistake in his testimony and asked if he should correct it and Hawley told him to do so.

"Didn't McParland speak to you about the method by which you could withstand cross-examination?" demanded Attorney Richardson, who has handled the cross-examination throughout.

WILL NAME MASTER TO EXAMINE MRS. MARY B. EDDY

Court Says Her Competency to Manage Affairs Must Be Determined.

Concord, N. H., June 10.—Mary Eddy's competency to manage her affairs must be determined by a master, according to the decision of Judge Robert N. Chamberlain in the Merrimac superior court today.

This decision was announced at the close of a hearing at which General Frank S. Streeter in the dual capacity of counsel for Mrs. Eddy and for Mrs. Eddy's three trustees, argued on a motion asking to have the suit brought by the relatives of Mrs. Eddy as "next friends" dismissed on the ground that the proceedings were not brought in good faith.

Suit in Good Faith, Says Howe.

The greater part of the session was occupied by General Streeter's argument, at the close of which Mr. Howe, of counsel for the "next friends" replied briefly stating that the suit, which names Calvin A. Frye, Mrs. Eddy's secretary, and nine other Christian Scientists as defendants, was instituted in good faith, and that it would be so proven when the case came before the court for a decision. Judge Chamberlain, having listened to counsel, announced that he would appoint a master to inquire into the competency of Mrs. Eddy. This master, it is expected, will be named before the end of the week. Counsel for the plaintiffs had expressed their intention of asking that Mrs. Eddy's competency be determined by a jury, but the decision that a master be appointed to pass upon the question, it is believed, will not now be opposed.

About two weeks ago the same court heard arguments on the motion of General Frank S. Streeter, representing the three trustees to whom Mrs. Eddy transferred her property, asking that the trustees be granted leave to intervene and be substituted as plaintiffs in place of "next friends" in th cequity proceedings brought against Calvin A. Frye, Mrs. Eddy's secretary, and nine other prominent members of the Christian Science church. This motion has been denied by the court.

Streeter's Deal Rob.

Today General Streeter appeared in the double capacity of counsel for the trustees and counsel for Mrs. Eddy. The motion argued today was a voluminous document, the substance of which was a request for the dismissal of the suit of the "next friends" and the discontinuance of the equity proceedings against Frye and the nine other defendants. This action was asked on the ground that it was not brought in good faith, that Mrs. Eddy is competent to attend to her own affairs and that her property is well managed.

The "next friends," who in their bill in equity allege that Mrs. Eddy is at the mercy of a clique of the Christian Science church and that her property is being diverted by such a clique to honor in a line nearest and parallel to the exposition grounds and were reached first by the Mayflower, so that their guns were the first to be heard in sounding their salutation. Either black or dark drab, the vessels of Austria-Hungary, Brazil, France, Italy, The Netherlands and Portugal appeared in sharp contrast to the Atlantic fleet of thirty-three vessels under the command of Rear Admiral Evans, these ships being draped in the usual peace paint of white for the hulls and buff for the superstructure.

The Rails Were Manned.

Each foreign and American ship manned the rails as the president passed in review. Completing the circuit the Mayflower came to her anchorage within the group of flagships and the president received on board the flag officers of the Atlantic fleet. The foreign flag and commanding officers were then received and in departing they proceeded to the exposition grounds where they went ashore at Discovery landing. A few minutes later they were followed by the president in the barge of the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet accompanied by the members of his party.

On the reviewing stand with the president and his party were Cardinal Gibbons, General Stephen D. Lee, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans; Governor Swanson, of Virginia; Governor Terrell, of Georgia, and a number of officials from that state; the Jamestown exposition state commissioners, distinguished United States army and naval officers, with a number of foreign representatives and prominent members of the National Editorial association.

Georgia's Celebration.

Following a patriotic selection by the exposition band, the program incident to the Georgia day celebration was opened by Governor Terrell, who introduced President Mitchell, of the Georgia commission, the master of ceremonies. Mr. Mitchell presented Cardinal Gibbons, who offered the invocation. The band played "Star Spangled Banner," after which Mr. Mitchell in an address introduced President Roosevelt, who delivered his first address. He was cheered throughout his entire speech. The president spoke for about an hour and at the conclusion he reviewed the military parade.

trains, the unloading of the cars, the transporting of the enterprise to the circus grounds on Griswold avenue, the erection of the immense tents and the other preparations for the great performances always given by the Barnum and Bailey aggregation.

All this was witnessed by thousands of people Sunday, both in the Lake Shore railroad yards and at the circus grounds, the two points having been the center of attraction for a multitude of both old and young to whom the marvelous system was a revelation. The circus arrived from Lafayette in four big trains, comprising a total of 35 cars, over the Lake Erie and Western railroad. It was about 9:30 o'clock when the first section steamed into Fort Wayne. A big crowd was at the depot to greet it, and the audience constantly augmented until the arrival of the last train shortly after noon.

With amazing rapidity and absolute system the trains were quickly unloaded and the wagons and vans drawn to the grounds on Griswold avenue. Here the transformation of a broad expanse of field into a tented city moved forward with wonderful swiftness and during the afternoon the grounds were visited by thousands of people who watched the work with genuine interest.

The big enterprise goes from Fort Wayne to Lima, Ohio.

Got Downpour of Rain.

During the progress of the performance this afternoon there came a deluge of rain that sent a big crowd of spectators that thronged the grounds outside the canvas scampering to half a dozen street cars which were lined up ready to convey the crowd back to the city.

The downpour was terrific, but it did not penetrate the canvas, and the big crowd inside suffered no inconvenience. There was very little wind and the shower caused no alarm among the crowd.

HARRY ORCHARD'S HEART IS CHANGED

Orchard Has Professed Religion.

"No, sir," replied Orchard, "but he spoke of what gave me strength to go through the examination."

Orchard has professed religion.

"Now, then," roared Richardson, "didn't you make this correction because you discovered that Easterly is here and Ackerman is not?"

"No, sir. I knew Easterly was here all the time."

Orchard said he had heard that Ackerman is in Goldfield, Nev.

Attorney Richardson next demanded to know of Orchard what he had talked to Nelson Franklin and A. E. Carlton, of the Mine Owners' association, about. He said he had a certificate of deposit in a bank which had closed and he heard these men were buying such certificates.

Orchard was going into details of the conversation when he was stopped by Richardson, who declared the matter immaterial. This brought out a protest from Senator Borah, who said:

"You asked for this; now take it as it comes."

"I didn't ask for a lecture," retorted the attorney for the defense.

Judge Wood said the prosecution could go into the matter on redirect examination if it desired and Orchard was not allowed to proceed.

Independence Depot Crime.

Orchard denied that he had ever discussed the mining troubles with Franklin and Carlton. He entered the same denial as to "Kid" Waters, Frank N. Reardon, A. T. Holman and Major Tom McClellan.

Richarson next took Orchard over the ground preceding the blowing up of the Independence depot. The witness said he had first discussed the matter with Parker and Davis, the strike managers in the Cripple Creek district, but he could not recall the exact date or place. Haywood whispered constantly in his attorney's ear as this part of the cross examination proceeded, prompting questions from time to time.

Orchard said he later discussed the Independence matter with Parker and Davis at the Belmont hotel in Denver and the lobby of the miners' convention, which was in session at the time. The witness declared that it was because Haywood's control of the federation was in jeopardy in the convention that the leaders wanted "something pulled off."

Richardson next jumped back to the Lyte Gregory murder in Denver, wanting to know if Orchard had not gone to the Adams hotel that evening.

Buried His Sawed-Off Gun.

"No, sir," replied the witness. "I first went to Pettibone's back yard and buried the sawed-off shotgun and then went home."

Orchard denied he had ever jumped from a window of the Adams hotel while Chief Loomis, of the Denver detective force, was looking for him.

After a long line of questioning, which developed little that was material, Mr. Richardson suddenly turned on Orchard and shouted:

"Look here, have you been cautioned not to give definitely any time or place during this cross-examination?"

"I have been cautioned as to nothing" retorted the witness, with feeling, "but to tell the truth."

"Who cautioned you?" demanded Richardson.

"Mr. McParland and Mr. Hawley."

"Mr. McParland is your mentor in this matter?"

"I don't know what you mean by mentor."

"I mean he has coached you."

"No, sir; no more than to tell me to tell the truth."

"You have also received a letter from Mr. Bangs, of New York, the superintendent of a detective agency, encouraging you, haven't you?"

Had Had No Letter from Pinkerton.

Orchard said he had never seen any such letter. He also denied that he had ever received a letter from William A. Pinkerton.

The witness was next required to relate the details surrounding each occasion on which he received money from Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone. He said he thought the first money he received from Pettibone was handed over in the latter's store. "And that was a public place, wasn't it?" asked Richardson.

"We went to the rear of the store," Orchard said. Pettibone had several employes in the store and rented desk room to two or more persons. He said there was usually no one present at the money interviews except himself, Steve Adams and either Haywood, Moyer or Pettibone. Speaking of himself and Adams, Orchard said:

"During the time we were working on Mr. Peabody we got $50 or $100 whenever we asked for it."

He said he was gambling and leading something of a dissolute life.

"Now, from all you have said and that you know, these defendants had nothing to do with planning the Vindicator mine explosion," suggested Richardson.

Merely Paid for It.

"Nothing other than to pay for it," replied Orchard.

"I limited my question as to plotting and planning," said Richardson. "They had nothing to do with planning the Vindicator explosion or the killing of Lyte Gregory?"

"No, so far as I know," replied the witness.

"Then they had nothing to do with any of your outrages until the Independence depot affair?"

"I believe they had something to do with it, yes sir."

"I mean as to planning?"

"No, they did not plan it."

FEDERATION UPHOLDS LEADERS.

Denver, Col., June 10.—The Western Federation of Miners met here today. The convention sent a telegram to Moyer and Haywood and Pettibone at Boise as follows:

"Fifteenth annual convention sends greetings. Confident of your innocence and we are with you until your honor is vindicated and your freedom assured.

BEACH HOTEL BURNS AND SOME MAY BE IN RUINS

Coast Hostelry Near Norfolk Destroyed—Proprietor is Frenzied.

Norfolk, Va., June 10.—The Princess Anne hotel at Virginia Beach, Va., was destroyed early today by fire originating in the kitchen. More than fifty guests had narrow escapes. Two negro chambermaids are reported missing.

The Norfolk and Southern railroad depot and Princess hotel bowling alleys also were destroyed. The loss is estimated at over $100,000.

While it is believed that of the eighty guests in the hotel all escaped with their lives, it was stated by persons coming up from the beach during the day that the excitement was so great that it could not be positively said that the fatality list would be only two.

Manager Mitchell, frantic as a result of the fire and his loss, sought today to end his life by jumping into the ocean, but was restrained by friends.

SECRETARY TAFT IS LIKE TO GET ON AYRES LIST

Army Officer's Wife Has Addition Blood in Her Fashing Eye.

New York, June 10.—The statement of Mrs. Ayres, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Charles G. Ayres, U. S. A., in which she spoke of the secretary of war's letter to her husband forbidding her to trespass upon the reservation in West Point as "so insulting and despicable that I will not repeat it or show it," and which she said she had placed in the hands of her lawyers, was considered an intimation at West Point, according to dispatches today, that she intended to include Secretary Taft in the suit for damages she announced she will bring.

Mrs. Ayres refused to explain further what was in the order which prevents her from seeing her son, Fairfax Ayres, who is a cadet at the academy. It was stated at West Point that Secretary Taft approved the recommendations of Colonel Mills and Colonel Scott, in their reports to the department on Colonel Howse's complaint against Mrs. Ayres, which is the basis for her suit.

The secretary, instead of ordering Colonel Ayres to remove his wife from near the post, instructed him to prevent her from "trespassing" upon the West Point reservation so long as their son shall be in the academy. If young Ayres should ever be severely ill, the secretary adds, she will be notified and a permit for her to see him will be issued either by the secretary or by Adjutant General Ainsworth.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

The Presbyterian Banner says of the great democratic leader: He is a grand Christian. The fact of his faith stands out in all his ways, his conversation, his table talks, his lectures, his private and public life. He is a man of the broadest charity, kindly in judgment and speech, and a Christlike spirit shines through his character and life. He is greatly interested in the work of all churches, but especially in the work of the Presbyterian church. He has grown and ripened with the years and has come to the summit of his powers. What the future has in store for him, to what use God will put him, time will tell."

WHY HE WOULD NOT DRINK.

Dr. Lorenz, the great Austrian surgeon, was at a banquet in his honor. Many of the guests drank. The principal guest, however, pushed his wine aside, untasted. Someone asked him if he were a teetotaler. "I cannot say that I am a temperance agitator," said Dr. Lorenz, "but I am a surgeon. My success depends upon my brain being clear, my muscles firm and my nerves steady. No one can take alcoholic liquor without blunting these physical powers which must be kept on edge. As a surgeon, I must not drink."

THE GREAT STRIKE HOLDS THREAT OF REVOLT

Half a Million French Wine Growers are Led by An Obscure Man.

Paris, June 10.—The revolt of the wine growing population in the south of France, which goes into effect today, is causing considerable apprehension in government circles. By the terms of the resolutions which half a million people at Montpelier yesterday swore with uplifted hands to execute, the departmental, city, town and communal officials must resign today, and the inhabitants refuse to pay taxes unless parliament affords relief. Several mayors, headed by M. Farroul, mayor of Narbonne, resigned last night, and if this example is followed a condition bordering on anarchy will result and the civil government will cease to reign from the Spanish frontier to the Rhone, comprising the departments of Herrault, Aude, Haute-Garonne and Pyrenees-Orientales. The situation is all the more grave because it constitutes a unanimous protestation of the population, and being unaccompanied by disorder furnishes the government with no pretext to resort to force.

Leader of the Movement.

Marcellin Albert, the leader of the movement, was until a couple of months ago an obscure wine grower of Argeliers. Now he is acclaimed as a "redeemer" and seems to hold the south of France in the hollow of his hand.

His orders are implicitly and unquestioningly obeyed and by the powers of organization with which he is endowed, he has proved himself to be a born leader of men. It is realized among the hot blooded people of the south that such a man might fire a formidable revolution.

The government's bill providing for the suppression of the manufacture of fraudulent wine comes up in the chamber of deputies this afternoon, but beyond passing this bill the government can do little, all the experts who have investigated the conditions having found that the real depression was caused by over production, for which even the rigorous suppression of fraud will be no remedy. The only solution they report is the abandonment of much of the wine acreage in favor of the regular farm crops and truck gardening.

View of the Press.

The outlook has caused much agitation in the press. The Aurore says it thinks the government should treat the impoverished wine growers as if they had been overtaken by a catastrophe and distribute money for their relief. "It would cost several millions," the paper adds, "but if it would restore tranquility, why hesitate?"

The Echo De Paris says the government undoubtedly has the right to arrest M. Albert, the leader of the movement, but it dreads the consequences of such action. The paper further asserts that the government "cannot yield to the anti-republican, illegal and anti-patriotic challenge."

INSTRUCTIVE LITTLE TALE.

There were two brothers, George and William.

William was the good boy. He was studious, methodical and economical.

He went into business, and by hard work and much self denial at last acquired a modest competency.

George was a gay, careless, easy-going fellow, who never applied himself seriously to anything, but enjoyed life as he went along.

One day, however, whe he had nothing else to do, he invented a mouse trap. It was a simple little affair, but operated on a new principle, and was different from any other trap in use.

He showed it to his brother William.

"Bill," he said, "if you will lend me money enough to patent this thing and put it on the market I'll divide all the profits equally with you.

"Nit," answered William, glancing carelessly at the trap. "There's nothing in it."

Thus repulsed, George went to a shrewd capitalist, who at once invested $5,000 in his invention.

And lost every cent of it.

William was right.—Chicago Tribune.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Although Washington appreciated the good things of life, he would not tolerate extravagance. His steward at one time purchased the first shad of the season, knowing it to be a favorite dish of Washington's. "How much did you pay for it?" asked Washington.

"Three dollars."

"Take it away. I will not countenance such extravagance in my house."

After Washington's retirement from the presidency, Elkanah Watson was a guest at Mount Vernon. He had a serious cold, and after he retired he coughed severely. Suddenly the curtains of his bed were drawn aside and there stood Washington with a huge bowl of steaming herb tea. "Drink this," he said, "it will be good for that cough."

BREWER'S TRIBUTE TO CHRIST.

Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States supreme court, says that religion is the principal factor by which the negroes of the south will be converted into a valuable asset of the nation.

"We know there is ignorance, criminality and immorality among the negroes," he said, "and it remains with us to change present conditions so that the negro will become a helpful factor in our civilization and progress.

"I believe a divine providence will so shape our history that the negro will be a helpful factor. Industrial development and useful things are good for the negro, but I believe nothing will help him so much as the influence of the cross of Christ, and nothing will so move him to being a good and useful citizen as the Gospel of the Prince of Peace."

BARBER WITH SMALLPOX WORKS AT CHAIR WHOLE DAY

Authorities Fear Spread of Disease and Are After Customers.

Dr. H. O. Bruggeman, secretary of the city board of health, reported today that J. B. Miller, who conducts a barber shop on South Calhoun street, near the railroads, worked at his chair all day Saturday with smallpox, and he fears there will be an epidemic of the disease as a result.

The names of a great many of the customers have been obtained and such as could be reached were vaccinated during the day and Miller was put under quarantine at his home, 2520 South Calhoun street. The case was reported to the health department Sunday and Dr. Bruggeman began an immediate investigation and is endeavoring to reach all of the men who patronized the shop on Saturday.

TRAINING CABINET CRISIS

Victoria, B. C., June 10.—News was brought from Japan by the steamer Bellerophon that when Admiral Yamamoto, now traveling with Prince Fushimi, returns to Japan an effort will be made to defeat Premier Saionji's cabinet and form a new ministry, headed by Admiral Yamamoto, former minister of the navy.

Next to London, Manchester has the largest Jewish population of any English town. There are 28,000 Jews in Manchester, and 20,000 in Leeds. Liverpool has 7,000. There are 227,166 Jews in Great Britain.

BOARD PREPARES PLANS FOR CITY PARK AT DELTA LAKE

Ordinances Will Be Presented at Meeting of the City Council.

Ordinances are being prepared and arrangements made by the board of park commissioners for the establishment of a city park surrounding Delta lake, in Lakeside, and if the matter is carried through about twenty acres will be purchased and donated.

The park will extend along Crescent avenue and will embrace the big grove north of the lake and about five or six lots off Forest Park addition. The sale of a strip of land along the south side of Lawton park is contemplated in the deal and this money will be used for the purpose of purchasing land near the lake. The Lakeside Park company will make a donation of several lots and this afternoon the park commissioners held a meeting at which the necessary resolutions were passed.

The mayor, a number of city councilmen and several officials met in Lakeside yesterday afternoon and looked over the ground and all are in favor of the scheme.

Staten Island dwellers who have their business in New York wish to do part of their day's work in the time they spend daily on the ferry, and to this end the Richmond Borough Realty association has been considering the plan of having girl stenographers on the Staten Island ferryboats.

Hal Bly, a young deaf mute at Kendallville, was drowned in Mud lake north of the city Saturday morning. The young man was subject to epileptic attacks, and it is believed one of the seizures came upon him as he was standing on a log fishing, and he fell helplessly into the lake, drowning in very shallow water. The body was recovered Sunday morning.

William Kelsey, of Columbia City, says he has three brothers and that their combined ages, with that of his own, aggregate 298 years, or an average of nearly 75 years. The aggregate height of the four brothers is twenty-six feet and four inches, and the four resemble each other so closely that it is difficult even for close friends to distinguish them apart.

Three of the quadruplets born a short time ago to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Croxton, near Roanoke, are now dead. There were three girls and a boy. Although the four children were well developed the fourth child died in two and one-half hours after birth, the first one died in three hours and the third child died in thirty hours after birth. The second child, the smallest of the four, is still living and in a healthy condition. The babes weighed 3 pounds each.

Angered because she found her husband with another man and two women in the wine-room of Dan Lung's saloon in Churubusco at 10 o'clock Saturday evening, Mrs. Virgil Brumbaugh fired four shots from a revolver at her husband and his associates. All of the bullets went wild save one, which made a slight wound on the index finger of her husband's right hand. Others in the party were F. E. Newsom, a baker, who came to Churubusco from Chicago a month ago, and "Gyp" Rapp and Mrs. Maud Dull-Robinson. Brumbaugh and Newsom were taken into custody, but were afterwards released upon their own recognizance, and Newsom left town.

COLUMBIA CITY PLEASED.

Fort Wayne Artists Delight an Audience at U. B. Church.

(Columbia City Post.)

Owing to the rain the entertainment at the U. B. church Friday evening was not so well patronized as it otherwise would have been. However, there was a fair-sized audience present and it can safely be said that all were highly pleased.

Mrs. F. V. Culbertson, who gave several piano selections and also accompanied Mr. Ross on the violin and Miss Gill in her solos, is a remarkable pianist and plays with wonderful skill and fine expression.

Miss Anna Philley, the reader, is very much at ease and in monologue is most excellent. Her visit to the department store, and "Mrs. Casey at the Woman's Club" were given with pleasing effect. Miss Gill is a fine contralto singer and her voice is one of great volume and compass and at the same time soft and musical.

No doubt the playing of Harry A. Ross, the violinist, was admired more than the work of any of the ladies, because his equal had never been heard before. His playing was grand and the audience expressed its appreciation by frequent encores. The closing number was one of the most beautiful things of the evening, in which all members of the company took part. Miss Philley, being accompanied by Mrs. Culbertson on the piano and Mr. Ross on the violin, recited "Aux Italiens" while Miss Gill sang at intervals. This was especially adapted to her voice and revealed it in its fulness and beauty.

The church officials asked the company for a return engagement but no date was set for it.

The president's rapid fire oratory is in fine working order and two notable speeches at the Jamestown exposition constitute the presidential contribution to the day's discussion of big things.

The late Marvin Kuhns, an eminent citizen of Northern Indiana, is to be celebrated in a book. Hope the author will succeed in finding something in this now dead outlaw's life that is really worth relating. For the most part Kuhns was a petty thief and a stealer of horses.

The new hotel project now looks so good that should it fail the town would not soon recover from the shock. We believe the interest now felt in this splendid enterprise is of such substantial and purposeful sort that failure of the project is not to be thought of. Aside from the fine aspects of the enterprise as an investment is the vital need that it will supply.

There will be no divergence of opinion as to the man Orchard. If what he says in his revolting narrative is true the law prescribes no punishment that can fit his case. If he is lying, it may well be doubted if he would be regarded as less a monster after committing such an elaborate perjury in order to send a man to the gallows. However he is taken Orchard is a man of whom the world will be well to be rid.

Editor Thad Butler's proposal that governor Hanly be boomed and groomed for the republican vice presidential nomination looks like a deliberate attempt to spike a switch in front of the Fairbanks train. The governor is handicapped by nothing save the intense "state pride" and deep "favorite son" affection felt by all Indiana republicans for the vice president and the priority of the Fairbanks boom. We observe with pain, however, that Editor Butler's opening gun for Hanly in the new Morning Times at Huntington has provoked some asperities for which there is neither excuse nor condonement.

It was learned on excellent authority that the French government has received assurances from the state department that many of the concessions contained in the German tariff agreement just promulgated will be available for France as soon as details can be arranged. This applies to matter of tariff administration and particularly to the provision regarding the consideration as evidence of market value of export prices furnished officially by the German Chamber of Commerce. It was also learned that France has made strong though exceedingly courteous diplomatic representations to the state department, and has received in reply a statement that it is the administration's desire to remove any cause that may exist for dissatisfaction. France, however, does not seem to occupy as favorable a position as Germany, judging from an official report on export prices. The German Chamber of Commerce, a government organization and the system on which these associations are conducted is very complete. France has not the same completely organized system of chambers, so that some other form of export price information will have to be devised.

BEACH HOTEL IS BURNED.

Norfolk, Va., June 10.—The Princess Anne hotel at Virginia Beach, Va., was destroyed early today by fire originating in the kitchen. More than fifty guests had narrow escapes. Two negro chambermaids are reported missing.

A property owner in Kingston, a London suburb, has posted a notice that "no grandchildren or cats" will be allowed on his premises.

HIS THEME WAS VALUE AND PURPOSE OF LEARNING

Rev. Henry B. Master's Sermon to High School Graduates.

Rev. Henry B. Master, at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, delivered the annual baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Fort Wayne high school, devoting his effort to a forceful discussion of the value and purpose of education.

The audience comprised the forty-six young ladies and gentlemen who comprise the class of '07 and a very large assemblage of their friends, music for the service being rendered by the regular church choir. Rev. Mr. Master chose for his text Proverbs 2:7—"He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous." The sermon was as follows:

"In the minds of thoughtful men two very different conceptions of the purpose and value of learning have always striven for supremacy.

"(1.) On the one hand there are those who believe that knowledge is an end in itself. The fact that a thing is believed to be true is their highest warrant for seeking to know it. Truth for truth's sake, is their watchword. Men who feel thus concerning knowledge find something almost degrading in the endeavor to turn each bit of sound wisdom to some practical purpose; to make all learning flow into some utilitarian channel. They cry out against the tendency to discredit the discovery which is new, or to condemn the study of something which is old, Latin and Greek for example, unless it can be shown that the discovery or the study will contribute in some way to material prosperity.

"Again there are those who maintain just as stoutly, and when you consider the progress of manual training in the public schools of our own and other lands, quite as convincingly, that knowledge never can be an end in itself, but always and everywhere only a means to an end. Insofar as it does not minister to happiness and health, helpfulness and hope, it is a mere abstraction, and it is pointed out that the lives of men, whatever be true of head or heart, are governed not only by the abstract, but the concrete. The knowledge which can take a rude forked stick, man's first agricultural implement, and gradually transform it into the steam plow, is glorious because useful. The knowledge, the wisdom, which sighs and sings in a poem like Tennyson's 'In Memoriam,' has little appreciable value. Perhaps as representative of this whole class we might accept Sir Isaac Newton, of whom it is recorded that having read Milton's Paradise Lost, he laid it down wearily and asked: 'What does it all prove?'

Where Theories Differ.

"These then are the two contending theories as to the purpose and value of knowledge. The one glorifies truth for what it is. The other crowns it for what it can do. At the first glance it may seem that they have nothing in common. The lines of an ionic column were once supposed to be parallel, and you know that by definition parallel lines are those which can never meet. But it was discovered in the case of the column that if the lines were sufficiently prolonged they did meet and therefore the supposition that they were parallel was mistaken. Just so these apparently widely different conceptions of the purpose and value of learning, if they are thought out will eventually meet and coalesce.

REV. HENRY B. MASTER,

Pastor of First Presbyterian Church Who Preached Baccalaureate Sermon to Graduating Class of Fort Wayne High School.

"I consider first the statement that knowledge is an end in itself. One cannot help feeling that the declaration is made because of the well known fact that knowledge usually does issue in one or both of two forms—culture and character. It may become either. It ought to become both. We speak of the man who has absorbed something of 'the best which has been taught and known in this world' as a cultured man. That is practically Mr. Matthew Arnold's definition of the word, and Mr. Arnold, as you remember, was himself one of the great modern apostles of the reality which the word represents.

Possibilities Are Vast.

"It is such culture which is the goal, one of the goals, of all education not purely technical. The immense service which the average school and college is fitted to render its students is that of bringing them face to face with the best which has been taught and known in this world. But it can do even more. It can lift those students to even higher levels of mental power and emotional possibility. At least the ideal school or college is the one which quickens the scholar's power of apprehension and appreciation. To make practical application of that statement, I venture to say if your study during the past four years has not made it possible for you to do some things today with comparative ease, which were once quite impossible; if today you cannot feel the influence of certain things which once had no power to touch your hearts; if today you cannot admire much in which you formerly saw no beauty, then your so-called education has been a mere hewing of wood and drawing of water. Doubtless you have been instructed, but you have not been educated. You may have memorized a number of facts and figures, but the real purpose in learning them—the power to make effective use of them—you must have altogether missed.

Gives Truest Definition.

"But why? Just because the etymology of the word 'education' gives the truest definition of its real meaning. It comes from the Latin 'educo,' to lead out, to draw forth. How then can we evade the conclusion that simply to put facts or figures into the mind is not to educate the man? This is practically what so many of our modern educators are saying to us. With increasing emphasis they tell us that it is not enough to store the head with the facts of art, and literature, and mathematics, and science. Along with all this must go the appeal to and the training of the emotional side of man's nature. If an education is intended to fit the scholar for life how irrational to overlook or neglect an element in his nature which controls or colors three fourths of all his conduct. It is therefore a training which involves both apprehension and appreciation of the best which has been taught and known which issues in what we call culture. Yet strictly speaking, culture is neither the apprehension of facts, nor the facts which are apprehended. It is analagous to water which, while composed of two elements, is through their combination unlike either. When the formulas, and names, and dates which are the means, the materials of education have been combined by a power not their own, and have been assimilated by the scholar, then and only then do they issue in real culture.

Character a Goal.

"You see at once that if culture be one of the goals of education, character must be another. Many have professed to believe that nothing more than education, secular education, is necessary to secure a character which God and man will approve. I have no desire to enter into that controversy this morning. It is sufficient to say that the average teacher today is genuinely anxious that the result of instruction shall be something more than information. That it should tell on character. That it should encourage and develop purity, honesty and nobility of soul. Universally today it is acknowledged that man needs something more than polish. He needs power. And power is always the outgrowth of what a man is. Nor is it difficult to understand how education influences character.

What True Education Does.

"Education trains the mind that we may think more clearly; that we may be able to follow a man like Euclid in his demonstration, or a man like Plato in his philosophy; that we may walk with historians like Bancroft, and Green, and Motley, through the long corridors of time, capable of forming our own, and unbiassed judgments of men and events, tracing also the outworking of that unceasing purpose which runs through all ages. True education touches the heart, awakening and calling forth all its deeper emotions and finer feelings, so that we may listen as Channing says, 'to stars and birds, babes and sages, with open soul.' In a word it ought to issue in the development of the very best of which the scholar is capable. Never perhaps in quite the same way in any two cases. Never in any two cases to quite the same extent. But whenever an education has accomplished anything like its perfect work it is transmuted, transformed into culture and noble character. Both of which are simply the development of latent possibilities. If a man has attained either it is because the seed of culture or noble character was already in his soul. All the education in the world cannot create the one or the other. It can only draw them forth.

Knowledge in the Bare Aspect of Utility.

"II. Consider then that second theory which values knowledge solely for the use which can be made of it. The one I have just been discussing seems to think of learning only in its relation to the individual. This theory appears to think of it only in its connection with the many. Now concerning this second conception I ask you to remember that all the high and beautiful service which scholarship has so frequently rendered, has been made possible only by the character of the scholars themselves. That is true of any great achievement, and it matters not from what realm you select it. Whether you take a poem like the Iliad, or a painting like the Sistine Madonna, or an invention like the telegraph or telephone. Of course I am now using scholarship in the broadest, and as I believe finest sense, nor do I forget that man may be a very bad man and at the same time a very capable student or a very great discoverer. All I wish to emphasize at this point is simply this. Whenever knowledge of any kind is put to practical uses it is because of the existence, the development of a mind or heart capable of utilizing it. The gift of scholarship is always a personal gift. The gift of the poem, the painting, the invention, comes to the world from an individual. A little less of character, a little less of self-culture, and the man would have been incapable of producing the poem, the painting, the invention. What he was made possible what he did. What he first won for himself became the basis of what he afterwards had to give to others.

The Power of the Human Life.

"A second fact worthy of attention is this. In all the world there is no power comparable with that which issues directly from human lives. We point with pride to certain epoch-making discoveries. Printing, steam, electricity. A man must be blind indeed who does not recognize what tremendous forces all these have been—what blessings they have conferred upon the world. Surely it would be ungracious to turn from these agencies which have done so much for the advance of civilization without acknowledging the debt we all owe them. Nor have I any least desire to do any such thing. Nor can I refrain from pointing out that up to this hour there is no influence in the world which can be compared with personal influence. The real rulers of our race today are a few great souls to whom we look up, always with respect; sometimes with reverence; in one case with awe and adoration.

"Do you know what the population of China is? Do you realize the significance of the fact that for so many centuries the many millions of China have followed with more or less obedience the precepts and teaching of their great leader Confucius? Do you know what the population of India is? Have you never marvelled that after so many, many years so much of India still worships at the shrine of her great teacher Gautama Buddha? Do you remember how Carlyle says of Mahomet: "The word this man spoke has been the life guidance now of a hundred and eighty millions of men these twelve hundred years. These one hundred and eighty millions were made by God as well as we. A greater number of God's creatures believe in Mahomet's word at this hour, than in any word whatever."

What Christ Has Wrought.

"Or take, if you please, the influence of one other. Think what Jesus Christ has wrought. Think of the enduring power which has flowed forth from Him. 'If you can imagine a handful of sweet spices cast into the ocean, subduing its salt and brackish bitterness, and making it forevermore sweet and pleasant to the taste; or a handful of fragrance thrown into the air, spreading and penetrating till it filled the atmosphere of every land, and made it healing and grateful as the breadth of Paradise, you will have an imperfect physical analogy of what Christ's influence has been, and what His teaching has done, for the though and spirit of man.' Little enough, even at this day, do China, or India, or Arabia know or care about your printing presses, and your steam railroads, and your electric telephones and telegraphs. But in some dumb way each of them knows and cares most mightily about the spirit and teaching emanating from some one man.

"So that the problem comes to us at last in this form. What a man makes of himself determines what he can do for others. All that men have done for their fellows along the lines of advancing civilization and material betterment has not won them a tithe of the respect and gratitude which has flowed in upon a few great souls because of what they were.

"That is as true of the lesser man as of the race's intellectual and spiritual giants. Make up your minds today that the greatest good you will ever do will be done through what you are, what you become. You may or may not advance the cause of art, or literature, or science; you may or may not achieve conspicuous success in the realm of commerce. It will make little difference if during your lives, following the example of our Lord Jesus Christ and trusting in His power, you live simply, purely, nobly. The best gift any man ever made his day or generation, or those who came after him, was—himself.

"How better can I close than by quoting those words of John Ruskin: 'Education is the leading of human souls to that which is best, and making what is best out of them; and these two objects are always attainable together and by the same means. The training which makes men happiest in themselves, also makes them most serviceable to others.'

"May God through your trust in the Saviour Christ, bless you all with the truest culture, and the noblest character, and through your possession of these open before your feet paths of broad and beautiful service."

What The Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

The calaboose now presents a summery appearance. Both stoves have been removed.

The paper mill bridge over the St. Joe gave way yesterday, the piles having rotted. Fortunately no one was on the bridge at the time. A new iron structure will be built there at once.

Hon A. P. Edgerton, who is a personal friend of Chief Justice Waite, in response to a telegram from that gentleman to meet him at Defiance, will leave for that place tomorrow morning.

Entries for the walking match at the Academy, commencing tonight, are as follows: Fred Krohne, the "Prussian Grenadier;" John Lorens, ("Dutch John") of Albion, Mich.; A. Loring, Chicago; George Huber, jr., Fort Wayne; "Unknown," of Fort Wayne, entered by A. Aronson; Benjamin Butler, Defiance, O., and Charlie Jones, Fort Wayne.

The committee on invitation for the Fourth of July celebration was called to meet at the office of Mayor Zollinger. The committee included C. A. Zollinger, F. P. Randall, William Fleming, John Morris, Rev. J. H. Brammer, Rev. W. T. Yocum, Rev. W. N. Webbe, Rev. A. Duschner, Rev. C. G. Hudson, Rev. G. I. Kelrn, A. Wolf, E. Haberkorn, O. A. Simons, A. S. B. Bond and H. G. Olds.

The annual commencement exercises of the Central Grammar school were held. Miss Edith M. Brewster delivered the salutatory and read an essay on "A Visit to Mount Olympus." Miss Minnie Sidle's essay was on "The Fire-Worshippers," Miss Edith M. Cothrell's essay treated of "Wonders of Animal Life." Gustave G. Detzer's oration was on "Milton's Satan." Miss M. E. McClure's essay dealt with "The Character of Portia." Miss Jennie Abel's theme was "The Coliseum at Rome." Elmer Leonard spoke of "Daniel Webster in Congress," and was heartily applauded for his vigorous elocution. Miss Annie Dick's essay was on "Calendars." Miss M. Alice Tarmon discussed "The Influence of Music." Arthur N. Fitzsimmons described "The Bastile." Miss Marilla A. Craig gave a review of Chaucer'se "Canterbury Pilgrims." H. A. Stouder's effort was an oration, "The Modern Claudius." Miss Laura Goshorn gave a clever rhyme entitled "Achilles' Heel." Miss Alice Chaplin told how "The Best Men are Moulded from Faults;" Wilmer Leonard's oration was on "Civil Service Reform," and Miss Lottie VanAlstine, the valedictorian, read an essay on "The Similes of Homer."

TRIBUTE PAID MEMORY OF MANY ABSENT MEMBERS

Knights of Pythias and Ben Hur Lodges Hold Services.

The annual memorial day of Fort Wayne lodge, No. 116, Knights of Pythias, was observed Sunday with impressive services at the K. of P. home, on Washington boulevard. Hon. James M. Robinson, in an eloquent address, paid a fervent tribute to the memory of the departed members. There has not been a death in the lodge during the year, but fifty of the brethren lie in the different cemeteries of the city. In the morning the graves were decorated with flowers by the members of the decorating committee.

The members of Ben Hur lodge, No. 15, held their annual memorial services at the Calvary United Brethren church and heard a very excellent address by the pastor, Rev. G. F. Byrer. Thirty-one chairs were draped in mourning in memory of the departed members since the institution of the lodge. Special music was furnished by the choir. In the morning a special committee was delegated to decorate the graves of the deceased members in the various graveyards.

CHILDREN ARE PERMITTED TO LIVE AS MAN AND WIFE

Girl Goes to Probation Officer and Lad Has Sentence Suspended.

Developments in the city court this morning show that Horace Williams and Ollie Vaughn, aged seventeen and fourteen respectively, were permitted by their friends here to live as man and wife and that with the full knowledge and consent of their friends they had gone to 116 West Jefferson street to secure rooms and were arrested there a short time afterward. Williams is a coremaker and is thought to have come here to take a place in the Bass foundry. He stopped at the Otto house with an older brother. The younger man and the girl were known there as man and wife. The girl will not be fifteen until October, although she is well developed and would readily pass for much older. She was placed in charge of the probation officer and will probably be taken back to her home at Canton by her brother-in-law.

The Other Cases.

James McCann, seventy-two and plain drunk. Let go on promise to quit drinking.

Wallace Schafer, first time up. Drunk and wanted to talk to every woman he met. Let go with a lot of advice.

Milton Brundage. Came in by freight on Pennsylvania. Pinched for train climbing and placed in hands of probation officer.

Mike Lucas. Don't know any language that anybody around the city hall knew. Vagrant. Will be heard tomorrow if interpreter is secured.

Pat McGuire, puddler at rolling mills. Got drunk and took off all his clothes. Cost him $11.

Milton Farmer, drunk. Up before, but promised to keep sober and is to report progress in two weeks.

Walter Ward. Drunk and wouldn't go home. Goto off with reprimand and at solicitation of employer.

Three men and four women pinched at Bee Hive on Superior street. Women all old-timers and men ought to have known better. Fines of $5 and costs handed around.

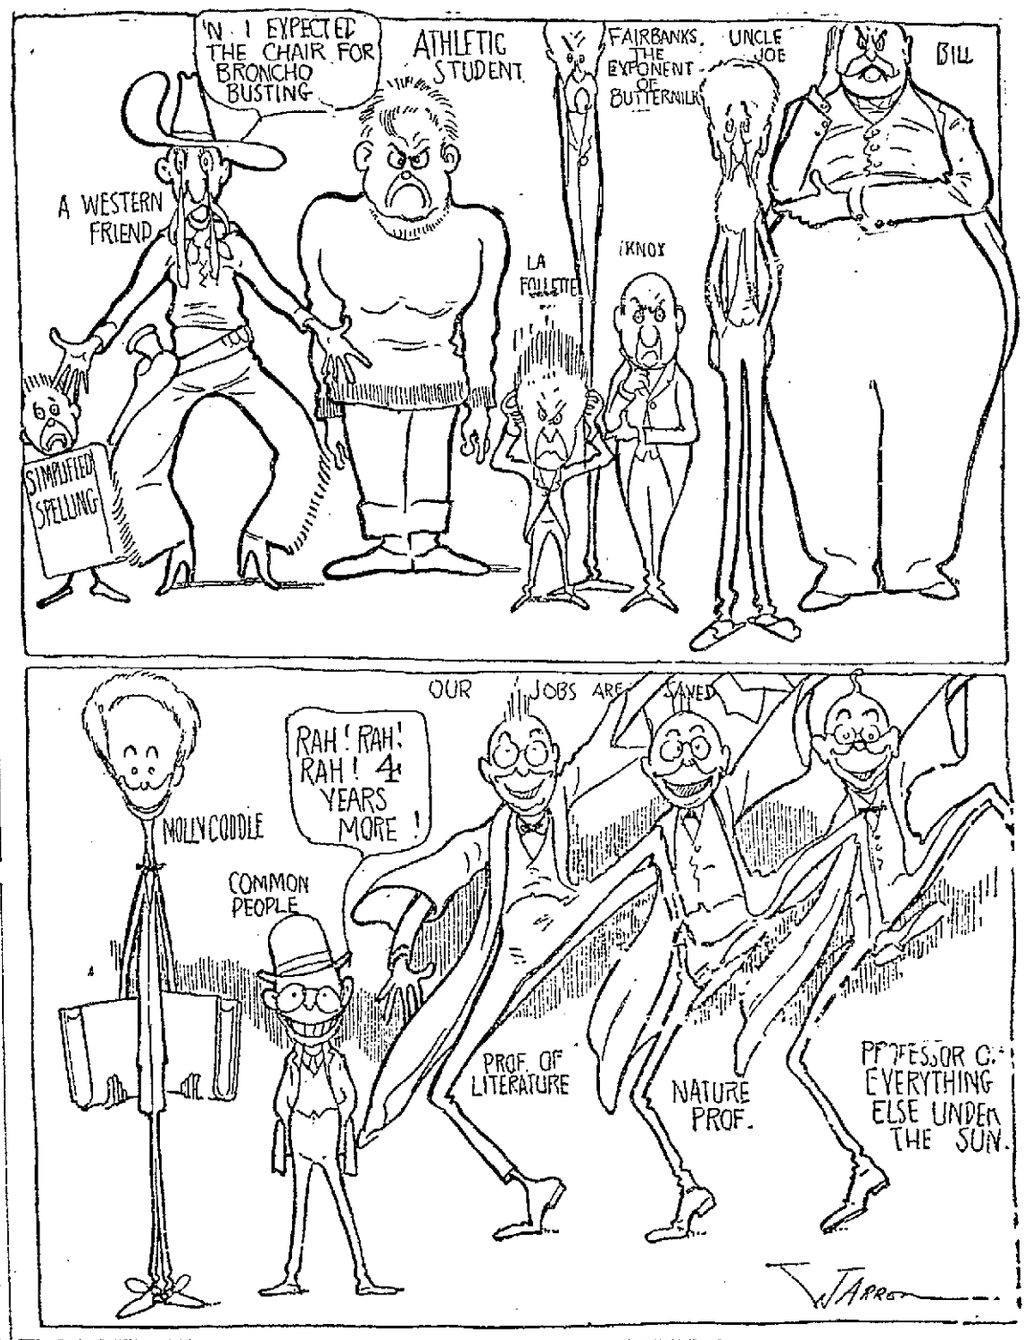

Henry Woehnker, permitting minors to loiter in his saloon. Continued until Wednesday.

Fisher, Judge and Mrs. Olds, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Woodworth, Mrs. C. S. Knight, the Misses Ward.

A hundred Japanese lanterns lighted the yard and porch of the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Rice on Saturday evening and large rugs were spread on the grass that the children invited to Olga and Alice Rice's party might see to play in swings and with games or sit on the ground as they pleased in the evening. In the main however, the children were on the porch daneing to music furnished by Reineke's orchestra or quenching thirst with lemonade and small cakes, just as if they hadn't had all the supper they could eat an hour or two before. But it was a fine party as any one who asks any of the following children will find out: Marion Purcell, Wilma Brickner, Martha Dix, Irene Waters, Anne Shyrock, Gladys Haskell, Marie Calkins, Nellie Wilt, Florence Ankenbruck, Virginia Joost, Evelyn Plumadore, Lillian Blackstone, Violet Ray, Maxine Stevens, Grace Jumbro, Gladys Mueller, Edna Teagarden, Caroll Johnston, Geraldine Bulson, Gladys Glenn, Elizabeth and Cecil Bradshaw, Esther and Jane McCarthy, Lorena Travers, Delight and Esther Anderton, Marie Sullivan, Josephine Fleming, Margaret Magee, Katherine King, Ruth Israel, Ruth Reker, Jeanette Ryan, Mildred Noble, May Miner, Geneva Rogers, Josephine Travis, Agnes Loefler, Adele Frankel, Marjorie Fisher, Helen Magee, Josephine King, Maribel Olds, Mary Evans, Dorothy White, Katherine McCurdy, Jane Meriweather, Thelma Reul, Florence Fleming, Mary Williams, Herman Riley, May Beute, Margaret Johnston, Helen Reul, Arthur Loefler, Arnold Hitzeman, Elmer Weil, Robert Williamson, Ralph Lose, William Noble, Edward Cook, Otto Barnett, Harry Bolen, James Olds, Charles Doebler, Welker Wentz, George McAlevy, Ralph Rush, Donald Coudrey, William Fleming, Lawrence Hallenstein, William Wallace Evans, Robert Kelley, Paul Stevens, Eugene Bulson, Sam Geake, Rodney Bridenstein, Roy and Lee Rice, Noel Risk. Miss Maude Gaskins and Miss Sue Geake assisted in looking after the children.

Country Parties.

Fred Boshler and daughter, Miss Eva, who live near Nine Mile, were given a surprise on Friday by neighbors and relatives who took the necessary articles for a fine supper and called at the Boshler home to spend the day. Mr. Boshler has recently moved into a new home and the affair was a house warming. Dinner was served at noon. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Boshler, of Bryan, O., were among the guests, who numbered fifty.

An important family gathering took place on Saturday at the home in Maysville of Benjamin Cummings True, who has reached the advanced age of ninety-nine years with faculties of mind and body in healthy condition. The company consisted of relatives and members of the Maysville I. O. O. F. lodge. Mr. True is said to be the oldest member of the organization.

Wash Suit for Business Girls

—BY MRS. JANE FORD—

This design is intended for young girls who are going to business and for older girls and women, who can be more easily fitted in a misses' costume than in a small sized woman's garment.

The pattern is cut in three sizes, for girls from thirteen to seventeen years of age.

A plaited skirt such as the one shown in this costume is particularly suited to young girls and, having only six gores, requires much less material than the average garment of this style. Care should be taken to match the plaids or stripes if goods of this design is used; directions as how to do this were given in a previous article.

The shirt waist should set neatly around the neck and over the shoulders, and ample fulness over the bust must be given by tucks or plaits. This looseness should be confined at the waist line by a belt. The proper arrangement of the fulness is important if the waist is to look well when finished. After the upper part is satisfactorily fitted, draw a piece of tape snugly around the waist over the material and pin it together either in the back or the front, according to where the waist closes. Distribute the fabric so that the plaits hang in straight lines from the shoulders down, and do not make the mistake of drawing it in a bunch to the center back and front. Waists are no longer bloused, but care must be taken that a drawn appearance is not given them. When satisfactorily arranged, pin the tape to the material and take the waist off. A gathering thread is then run in at the waist line and the tape stitched to the material.

For summer dresses of this character, popular favor is bestowed upon the gingham and not for a decade has this goods been sought after as it is the present season. At first the possible popularity of the stripe was questioned, as plaids were so much in favor; but at this time stripes are sanctioned by everyone, although plaids still hold their own. Fashionably dressed young women are choosing either of these. Stripes are shown in various widths and groupings, and in contrasting and self colors. Blue and white, rose and white, and green and white are equally chic; therefore one need not hesitate as to which of these to select, keeping only in mind the becomingness of color.

FORT WAYNE WOMAN HONORED.

Miss Hanker and Miss Harrison at Dancing Masters' Convention.

At the recent convention of Dancing Masters held at Atlantic City two Fort Wayne women were elected to office for the coming year: Miss Ida M. Harrison was elected fourth vice president and Miss Hulda Hanker was elected demonstrator. Miss Hanker was the official instructor at the convention and Miss Harrison was one of the instructors who presented special work. The convention was said to be the largest and most successful one in the history of the organization. One of the new dances was named The Raleigh in compliment to the hotel where the sesisons were held.

I. G. Stafford, for a number of years manager of the Fort Wayne Paper and Blank Book company, will leave in a few days for Texas, where he expects to locate permanently.

SAD DREAMS

Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.

"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and gone to drinking Postum Food Coffee, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions.

"I was astonished at the flavor. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could warn every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug (caffeine) in ordinary coffee.

"People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned.

"A young lady friend of ours had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit it and began the use of Postum and is now perfectly well." "There's a Reason." Read the little "Health Classic," "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

OVER 200 FORT WAYNE PEOPLE TO JOIN FRATERNITY

Spectacular Initiation by Tribe of Ben Hur Tonight.

More than two hundred Fort Wayne candidates will be added to the membership of the Tribe of Ben-Hur in a spectacular initiation to be given at the Majestic theater this evening, and the event will be a notable one in the fraternal circles of the city.

LACE MADE AT HOME

DAINTY AND SIMPLE PATTERN FOR PRINCESS LACE.

Making the popular "princess lace," so much worn now, is quite a simple process when one understands how the designs of braid are attached to the plain net.

Neat sewing is the one essential, and any woman who can use her needle deftly can make at home exquisite, if somewhat fragile, articles in this work.

Pieces of the lace may be rapidly fashioned, and if the sewer can draw original patterns the trimming will be distinctive.

These designs, to be copied on the net, are cut from calico and then attached to the foundation material, so the outline of the device shows through clearly. Over the net the pattern is followed out by tacking on whatever braid is chosen, which is afterward neatly sewn in place, and then fancy stitches are worked here and there over the net to relieve the monotony and to give, where possible, the appearance of light and shade. If liked these stitches can be omitted, and then a design of fancy kind in braid is shown applique on the net ground work but the additional stitches add to the beauty as well as to the value of the work, as they show up the design and bring into prominence the beauty of it.

When tacking the net over the pattern be careful to have it perfectly smooth and flat, and without creases. Tack all round the edges and here and there throughout, so that the net will be kept in place over the pattern, and keep the long stitches at the back of the foundation. If the design contains flower sprays the stems may be worked in darning, commencing well up to the flower pattern, so that the ends be concealed beneath the braid, and working downward to the end of the stem and then up again to the beginning.

Care must be taken to have the stems gracefully curved. The braid can be cut where necessary for the neatness of the work, and the ends turned in and sewn down in place.

There are two kinds of net sold for the purpose—fine for personal use and coarser for household articles.

The braids are made in various widths and degrees of fineness to suit individual taste. Of course, for delicate designs very fine quality will be needed, while for the bolder pattern a coarser and wider one will be employed. The lace thread matches the braid in fineness, while all can be obtained in either white or cream color.

It is absolutely necessary that the net and materials used be of the very best, and even then they will cost only a few cents. The work must be kept perfectly clean when making.

Never before has there been such a demand for hand made lace as an accessory to the toilet, but it is very expensive, and out of reach for many women (except those who can afford to buy it); it is all but indispensable for the up-to-date woman who likes to show her individuality in its selection. In the easily made princess applique the woman of limited means has an opportunity of providing herself with everything requisite, or in adding to a slender income by making it for others.

There is no limit to the number of articles which can be made in this lace, from the entire dress to a child's bonnet, while it is equally adaptable for a tea cosey, tablecloth border or cushion cover.

The illustration shows a very simple design for the beginner, worked on the new shape cuff, and the materials used. The design is so simple that the merest tyro will find no difficulty in drawing it with pen and ink on a piece of white, somewhat tough but pliable paper cut to the shape.

Tack the net carefully over the lines as illustrated. Then remove the net, and darn in the centers with embroidery cotton.

The little rings can be bought or made by winding cotton round a small mesh, and then working over this ring a close row of ordinary buttonhole stitch, and then sewn into place. Be careful to sew the braid on the outside of the curves first. When the sewing is completed press the work on the reverse side with a hot iron, says The Queen.

The best method of cleaning princess lace is to cover a board with linen and pin the lace to it. Then pass the board several times through warm, soapy water. Afterward through clean tepid water to thoroughly rinse. If there remain any dirty spots they can be dabbed with a sponge dipped in warm soapy water until the stain disappears, then again rinsed. Shake the board gently, and put up to dry. On no account must the lace be rubbed or squeezed. If ironing be necessary place the lace face downward on the ironing board, which has been covered with several folds of soft flannel and a piece of cambric. Then place a piece of thin muslin over the lace, and press carefully with a hot iron.

LIVERWURST.

Quite familiar is the old Southern dish of liverwurst. Take six pigs' haslets (heart, liver, etc.) look over carefully, removing all imperfect parts. Put into a pot of water lightly salted and cook until tender. Chop fine. In another pot put about five pounds of fat pork. Boil until tender, take off the rind, chop fine and add to the liver. Throw away the water in which the haslets were cooked as it is not fit for food, but save the water in which the pork was cooked. Put the chopped mixture in the water with a dozen onions, chopped fine. Cook until the onions are tender. Season with powdered sage, salt and pepper and then sift in meal and cook until thick enough to fry. Pour into moulds and when cold slice and fry.

S.S.S. RIDS THE SYSTEM OF MALARIA

Malaria is an atmospheric poison which we unconsciously breathe into our system. The blood in its constant passage through the lungs absorbs the germs, and they destroy the rich, red corpuscles of this vital fluid and reduce it to such a weak, watery condition that it is unable to properly nourish the system, and disease gets a foothold. Then the symptoms of Malaria, such as pale, sallow complexions, weak vitality, poor appetite, deranged digestion, and perhaps chills and fever show that the trouble is affecting every part of the body. Malaria also affects the liver, producing a chronic state of biliousness, and often a long spell of fever follows when the blood becomes fully contaminated with the poison. Chronic Sores and Ulcers, boils, aches and pains, and skin affections of various kinds often result from this insidious disease if the poison is allowed to accumulate in the blood in sufficient quantities. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. This great remedy goes down into the blood and drives out all germs, microbes and poisons, and permanently cures Malaria. S. S. S. not only cleanses the blood of the cause, but furnishes it with the healthful properties it needs, so that instead of a weak, germ-infected stream, spreading disease throughout the system, it becomes a rich, red fluid, nourishing the body and enabling it to resist disease. S. S. S. is also the greatest of all tonics, and builds up and invigorates the entire system while ridding the blood of the germs of Malaria. Persons who are suffering from Malaria will be pleased with the prompt and pleasant results produced by the use of S. S. S., and can take it with confidence because it is an absolutely safe medicine, being free from harmful minerals of any kind. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

BLUFFTON BREAKS INTO WINNING STREAK OF SHAMROCKS

Couldn't Hit Hull and That Was Sole Cause of the Defeat.

A slender, but dazzling young product of the cow pastures and dog fennel lots of Spencerville, Hull by name, did mound duty for Bluffton yesterday afternoon against the Shamrocks and although the young fellow is not much bigger than a pint of hard cider, he had a collection of things that the locals couldn't discover and for eight innings he escaped with one hit chalked against him. The score was four to one with Wells county on the big end.

Anyhow, it was good ball and the entire nine innings passed with but one error that fell to Louie Gage on a hard chance. Jack Smith hit the first ball pitched to him for a sizzling liner to left but was doubled a few minutes later on Koons' pop to Hull. Purl Larue rewarded the plaudits of his host of friends by ramming the ball to left for two bags in the second, then he moved on a sacrifice by Johnson and Vogel's single to middle scored him.

With a hand gone in the sixth Pfefferle pounded out a double and Larue's second hit sent him around. The remaining scores were made in the eighth. Pfefferle hit to left for two bags, Gage's error gave Boyd life, Larue worked a squeeze that scored Pfefferle and Thomas and Vogel both stung the ball for singles to middle and two tallies resulted.

Jack Smith opened the ninth with a single and Koons and Cherry followed and for a minute or two it looked like a ninth inning rally but Quinn and Gage were unable to deliver and the locals barely escaped a shut-out. Manager Cleary was forced to use Robbins by the fact that Manager Grant disappointed him. He was to have had a pitcher here but missed connections and could not get him to Fort Wayne in time. Valenti went to Mishawaka to get a man but could not find him. Score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Pitcher Prough was tried out for an inning. He looked good. Out of three men up one sided to the catcher and the other two chopped.

Gage picked off two back of second that were sizzlers. His error was on a hard chance.

Quinn's catch of Hull's fly in the fifth was a star piece of gardening.

Koons trapped Vogel's hit in the eighth and returned it to the plate in time to get Boyd. Excellent work.

Hull had the locals on the hip all the time; even when they began to hit him in the ninth he kept steady.

Grubbs, the poet pitcher, got a paste on the shanks and was the only man that got soaked in the game.

It was clean cut base ball all the way through and a hard game to lose.

is able only to see the crimes of arrogance and oppression in the rich or the crimes of envy and violence in the poor. He is no true American if he is a respecter of persons where right and wrong are concerned and if he fails to denounce the demagogue no less than the corruptionist, to denounce alike crimes of organized greed and crimes of brutal violence. There is equal need to denounce the wealthy man who swindles investors or buys legislatures or oppresses wageworkers, and the needy man who inflames class hatred or incites mob violence. We need to hold the scales of justice even, and to weigh them down on one side is as bad as to weigh them down on the other.

Two Great Movements.

So much for what I have to say to you in your capacity of molders and guides of public thought. In addition I want to speak to you on two great movements in our public life which I feel must necessarily occupy no inconsiderable part of the time of our public men in the near future. One of these is the question of, in certain ways, reshaping our system of taxation so as to make it bear most heavily on those most capable of supporting the strain. The other is the question of utilizing the natural resources of the nation in the way that will be of most benefit to the nation as a whole.

In utilizing and conserving the natural resources of the nation the one characteristic more essential than any other is foresight. Unfortunately foresight is not usually characteristic of a young and vigorous people, and it is obviously not a marked characteristic of us in the United States. Yet assuredly it should be the growing nation with a future which takes the long look ahead; and no other nation is growing so rapidly as ours or has a future so full of promise. No other nation enjoys so wonderful a measure of present prosperity which can of right be treated as an earnest of future success, and for no other are the rewards of foresight so great, so certain, and so easily foretold. Yet hitherto as a nation we have tended to live with an eye single to the present, and have permitted the reckless waste and destruction of much of our natural wealth.

Necessary to Look Ahead.

The conservation of our natural resources and their proper use constitute the fundamental problem which underlies almost every other problem of our national life. Unless we maintain an adequate material basis for our civilization, we can not maintain the institutions in which we take so great and so just a pride; and to waste and destroy our natural resources means to undermine this material basis. During the last five years efforts have been made in several new directions in the government service to get our people to look ahead, to exercise foresight, and to substitute a planned and orderly development of our resources in the place of a haphazard striving for immediate profit. The effort has been made through several agencies.

In 1902 the reclamation service began to develop larger opportunities of the western half of our country for irrigation. The work includes all the states from the Great Plains through the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific slope. It has been conducted with the clear and definite purpose of using the valuable water resources of the public land for the greatest good for the greatest number in the long run; in other words, for the purpose of putting upon the land permanent home makers who will use and develop it for themselves and for their children and children's children. There has been opposition, of course, to this work of the reclamation service; for we have been obliged to antagonize certain men whose interest it was to exhaust for their own temporary personal profit natural resources which ought to be developed through use, so as to be conserved for the permanent common advantage of the people as a whole. But there will be no halt in the work of preserving the waters which head in the Rocky Mountain region so as to make them of most use to the people as a whole; for the policy is essential to our national welfare.

Care for the Public Lands.

The public lands of the United States should be utilized in similar fashion. Our present home land laws were passed when there was a vast surplus of vacant public land. The chief desire was to secure settlers thereon, and comparatively slight attention was paid as to exactly how the lands were disposed of in detail. In consequence, lax execution of the laws became the rule both in the land office and in the public mind, and land frauds were common and little noted. This was especially true when a system originally designed for the fertile and well-watered regions of the middle west was applied to the dryer regions of the Great Plains and to the mountains and the Pacific coast. In these regions the system lent itself to fraud, and much land passed out of the hands of the government without passing into the hands of the home maker. The department of the interior and the department of justice joined in prosecuting the offenders of the law; but both the law and its administration were defective and needed to be changed. Three years ago a public lands commission was appointed to scrutinize the law and the facts and to recommend a remedy. Their examination specifically showed the existence of great frauds upon the public domain, and their recommendations for changes in the law were made with the design of conserving the natural resources of every part of the public land by putting it to its best use. Attention was especially called to the prevention of settlement by the passage of great areas of public lands into the hands of a few men, and to the enormous waste caused by unrestricted grazing on the open range; a system of using the national forage on the public domain which amounts to putting a premium on its destruction. The recommendations of the public lands commission were sound, for they were especially in the interest of the actual home maker; and where the small home maker could not utilize the land, it was provided that the government should keep control of it so that it could not be monopolized by a few wealthy men. Congress has not yet acted upon these recommendations, except for the repeal of the iniquitous lieu-land law. But the recommendations are so just and proper, so essential to our national welfare, that I believe they will surely ultimately be adopted.

The Forest Reserves.

In 1891 congress authorized the president to create national forests in the public domain. These forest reserves remained for a long time in charge of the general land office, which had no men properly trained in forestry. But another department, that of agriculture, possessed the trained men. In other words, the government forests were without foresters and the government foresters without forests. Waste of effort and waste of forest inevitably followed. Finally the situation was ended in 1905 by the creation of the United States forest service, which has stopped the waste, conserved the resources of the national forests, and made them useful; so that our forests are now being managed on a coherent plan, and in a way that augurs well for the future.

The mineral fuels of the eastern United States have already passed into the hands of large private owners, and those of the west are rapidly following. This should not be, for such mineral resources belong in a peculiar degree to the whole people. Under private control there is much waste from shortsighted methods of working, and the complete utilization is often sacrificed for a greater immediate profit. The mineral fuels under our present conditions are as essential to our prosperity as the forests will always be. The difference it that the supply is definitely limited, for coal does not grow and trees do. It is obvious that the mineral fuels should be conserved, not wasted, and that enough of them should remain in the hands of the government to protect the people against unjust or extortionate prices so far as that can still be done. What has been accomplished in the regulation of the great oil fields of the Indian territory offers a striking example of the good results of such a policy. Last summer, accordingly, I withdrew most of the coal-bearing public lands temporarily from disposal, and asked for the legislation necessary to protect the public interest by the conservation of the mineral fuels; that is, for the power to keep the fee in the government and to lease the coal, oil, and gas rights under proper regulation. No such legislation was passed, but I still hope that we shall ultimately get it.

Should Preserve Public Domain.

In addition to treating aright for the benefit of the whole people the forests and the mineral beds, we should similarly try to preserve for the benefit of all the people the great stretches of public domain, some three hundred million acres in all, which are unfit for cultivation by present methods and valuable only for the forage which they supply. This vast area is now open to the free grazing of cattle, sheep, horses and goats, without restriction or regulation. When population has increased, as is now the case, such utter lack of management means that the public domain is turned over to be skinned by men whose only concern is to get what they can out of it at the moment, without any regard to whether or not it is ruined so far as the next generation is concerned. In other words, the range is not so much used as wasted by abuse; and as an incident conflict and bloodshed frequently arise between opposing users. With the rapid settling of the west the range is more and more overgrafed. Moreover, much of it can not be used to advantage unless it is fenced, for fencing is the only way by which to keep in check the absentee owners of nomad flocks which roam hither and thither, utterly destroying the pasturage and leaving a waste behind, so that their presence is incompatible with the presence of home-makers. Good judges estimate that our public range has now lost nearly half its value, yet fencing is against the law, and as the law now stands it is well-nigh impossible to do anything to keep the value of the range. The only practical remedy is to give control of the range to the federal government. Such control would not only stop all conflict but would conserve the forage without stopping its use, as our experience with the national forests has fully proved. It would likewise secure to the west the great benefits of legitimate fencing without interfering in the slightest with the settlement of the country. Hitherto, however, it has not proved possible to get any legislation to secure these ends. The destruction of the public range will continue until, as a nation, we insist upon the enactment of some such laws as those I have advocated.

Need New Laws to Deal With Fraud.

For several years we have been doing everything in our power to prevent fraud upon the public land. What can be done under the present laws is now being done through the joint action of the interior department and the department of justice. But fully to accomplish the prevention of fraud there is need of further legislation and especially of a sufficient appropriation to permit the department of the interior to examine certain classes of entries on the ground before they pass into private ownership. The appropriation asked for last winter, if granted, would have put an end to the squandering of the public domain, while it would have prevented any need of causing hardship to individual settlers by holding up their claims. However, the appropriation was not given us, and in consequence it is not possible to secure, as I would like to secure, the natural resources of the public land from fraud, waste and encroachment.

So much for what we are trying to do in utilizing our public lands for the public; in securing the use of the water, the forage, the coal, and the timber for the public. In all four movements my chief adviser, and the man first to suggest to me the courses which have actually proved so beneficial, was Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the chief of the national forest service. Mr. Pinchot also suggested to me a movement supplementary to all of these movements, one which will itself lead the way in the general movement which he represents and with which he is actively identified, for the conservation of all our natural resources. This was the appointment of the inland waterways commission.

Work of Waterways Commission.

The inability of the railroads of the United States to meet the demands upon them has drawn public attention forcibly to the use of our waterways for transportation. But it is obvious that this is only one of their many uses, and that a planned and orderly development is impossible except by taking into account all the services they are capable of rendering. It was upon this ground that the inland waterways commission was recently appointed. Their duty is to propose a comprehensive plan for the improvement and utilization of those great waterways which are the great potential highways of the country. Their duty is also to bring together the points of view of all users of streams, and to submit a general plan for the development and conservation of the vast natural resources of the waterways of the United States. Clearly it is impossible for the waterways commission to accomplish its great task without considering the relation of streams to the conservation and use of all other natural resources, and I have asked that it do so. Here, then, for the first time, the orderly development and planned conservative us of all our natural resources is presented as a single problem. One by one the individual tasks in this great problem have already been undertaken. One by one in practical fashion the methods of dealing with them were worked out. National irrigation has proved itself a success by its actual working. Again, actual experience has shown that the national forests will fulfill the larger purpose for which they were created. All who have thoughtfully studied the subject have come to see that the solution of the public lands question lies with the home maker, with the settler who lives on his land, and that government control of the mineral fuels and the public grazing lands are necessary and inevitable. Each of these conclusions represented a movement of vast importance which would confer large benefits upon the nation, but which stood by itself. They are connected together into one great fundamental problem—that of the conservation of all our natural resources. Upon the wise solution of this, much of our future obviously depends. Even such questions as the regulation of railway rates and the control of corporations are in reality subsidiary to the primal problem of the preservation in the interests of the whole people of the resources that nature has given us. If we fail to solve this problem, no skill in solving the others will in the end avail us very greatly.

Income and Inheritance Taxes.

Now as to the matter of taxation. Most of the civilized countries have an income tax and an inheritance tax. In my judgment both should be part of our system of federal taxation. I speak diffidently about the income tax because one scheme for an income tax was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court by a five to four vote; and in addition it is a difficult tax to administer in its practical workings, and great care would have to be exercised to see that it was not evaded by the very man whom it is most desirable to have taxed, for if so evaded it would of course be worse than no tax at all, as the least desirable of all taxes is the tax which bears heavily upon the honest man. Nevertheless, a graduated income tax of the proper type would be a desirable permanent feature of federal taxation, and I still hope that one may be devised which the supreme court will declare constitutional.

In my judgement, however, the inheritance tax is both a far better method of taxation, and far more important for the purpose I have in view—the purpose of having the swollen fortunes of the country bear in proportion to their size a constantly increasing burden of taxation. These fortunes exist solely because of the protection given the owners by the public. They are a constant source of care and anxiety to the public and it is eminently just that they should be forced to pay heavily for the protection given them. It is, of course, elementary that the nation has the absolute right to decide as to the terms upon which any man shall receive a bequest or devise from another. We have repeatedly placed such laws on our own statute books, and they have repeatedly been declared constitutional by the courts. I believe that the tax should contain the progressive principle. Whatever any individual receives, whether by gift, bequest, or devise, in life or in death, should, after a certain amount is reached, be increasingly burdened; and the rate of taxation should be increased in proportion to the remoteness of blood of the man receiving from the man giving or devising. The principle of this progressive taxation of inheritances has not only been authoritatively recognized by the legislation of congress, but it is now unequivocally adopted in the leading civilized nations of the world—in, for instance, Great Britain, France and Germany. Switzerland led off with the imposition of high progressive rates. Great Britain was the first of the great nations to follow suit, and within the last few years both France and Germany have adopted the principle. In Great Britain all estates worth five thousand dollars or less are practically exempt from death duties, while the increase is such that when an estate exceeds five millions of dollars in value and passes to a distant kinsman or stranger in blood the government receives nearly eighteen per cent.

Operations of Progressive Tax.

In France, under the progressive system, so much of an inheritance as exceeds ten millions of dollars pays over twenty per cent to the state if it passes to a distant relative, and five per cent if it passes to a direct heir. In Germany very small inheritances are exempt, but the tax is so sharply progressive that an inheritance not in agricultural or forest lands which exceeds two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, if it goes to distant relatives is taxed at the rate of about twenty-five per cent. The German law is of special interest, because it makes the inheritance tax an imperial measure, while allotting to the individual states of the empire a portion of the proceeds and permitting them to impose taxes in addition to those imposed by the imperial government. In the United States the national government has more than once imposed inheritance taxes in addition to those imposed by the states, and in the last instance about one-half of the states levied such taxes concurrently with the national government, making a combined maximum rate, in some cases as high as twenty-five per cent; and, as a matter of fact, several states adopted inheritance tax laws for the first time while the national law was still in force and unrepealed. The French law has one feature which is to be heartily commended. The progressive principle is so applied that each higher rate is imposed only on the excess above the amount subject to the next lower rate. This plan is peculiarly adapted to the working out of the theory of using the inheritance tax for the purpose of limiting the size of inheritable fortunes, since the progressive increase in the rates, according to this mode, may be carried to its logical conclusion in a maximum rate of nearly one hundred per cent for the amount in excess of a specified sum, without being confiscatory as to the rest of the inheritance; for each increase in rate would apply only to the amount above a certain maximum.

No Benefit in Great Fortunes.

I do not believe that any advantage comes either to the country as a whole or to the individuals inheriting the money by permitting the transmission in their entirety of such enormous fortunes as have been accumulated in America. The tax could be made to bear more heavily upon persons residing out of the country than upon those residing within it. Such a heavy progressive tax is of course in no shape or way a tax on thrift or industry, for thrift and industry have ceased to possess any measurable importance in the acquisition of the swollen fortunes of which I speak long before the tax would in any way seriously affect them. Such a tax would be one of the methods by which we should try to preserve a measurable equality of opportunity for the people of the generation growing to manhood. As Lincoln pointed out, there are some respects in which men are obviously not equal; but there is no reason why there should not be an equality of self-respect and of mutual respect, an equality of rights before the law, and at least an approximate equality in the conditions under which each man obtains the chance to show the stuff that is in him when compared with his fellows.

Speech to Georgians.

In his speech this forenoon on the occasion of the dedication of the Georgia state building President Roosevelt spoke in part as follows:

I can not express how deeply touched I am at the action of the state of Georgia, my mother's state, the state from which I draw half my blood in my veins, in erecting as the Georgia state house at the Jamestown exposition a replica of my grandfather's house at Roswell, Ga.; the house in which my mother passed her youth and where she was married to my father. It is an act of gracious courtesy and consideration which I very deeply appreciate; and through the governor and other representatives of Georgia I desire from my heart to thank all her citizens. Georgia's history is unique, for she alone among the original thirteen colonies and the subsequent new states added thereto, was founded with a consciously benevolent purpose, with the deliberate intent to benefit mankind by upbuilding a commonwealth along carefully planned lines of social, political, and religious liberty and justice. Oglethorpe, the founder of Georgia, was a true apostle of philanthropy and of equality of opportunity for all. His set purpose was to found a state the gates of which should be open to the oppressed of every land and creed, and closed to every form of political, religious, or industrial bondage or persecution. His colony welcomed alike those who fled from political or social tyranny, and those, whether Christian or Jew who sought liberty for conscience's sake. It was a high and honorable beginning; and I am proud, indeed, of my Georgian ancestry, and of the fact that my grandfather's grandfather, Archibald Bulloch, was the first governor, or as the title then went, president of the new state, when the Continental congress, of which he was also a member, declared that the thirteen states had become a new and independent nation. Since then Georgia has grown at a rate even more astounding than the rate of growth of the nation as a whole; her sons have stood high in every field of activity, intellectual or physical; and rapid though her progress has been in the past, it bids fair to be even greater in the wonderful new century which has now fairly opened.

Kinship of Whole Country.

Perhaps the very fact that I am half southern and half northern in blood, and that for many years I was brought into peculiarly close association with the life of the great west, makes it natural for me to feel with intensity the strong sense of kinship with every portion of our great common country, which should be the birthright of every true American. Since I have been president I have visited every state and territory within the borders of the Union, save such as can only be reached by sea. I have traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. I have spoken at county fairs, to colleges, to commercial and business organizations, to associations of professional men, to labor organizations, to men of every creed and parentage. The thing that has struck me most has been the essential oneness, the essential unity of our people.

In the fundamentals I have found American citizens to be just about the same everywhere. In whatever locality of the country we live, whatever our fortune or occupation in life, there exists just about the same essential good qualities and much the same shortcomings in any gathering of our citizens. Of course, each community has its especial temptations, its especial shortcomings; and if it is wise each community will try to cure itself rather than to cause heartburnings by railing at the shortcomings of a sister community. There is ample field for the reform energies of every one of us in his or her particular sphere of home and neighborhood activity.

Few So Bad as Painted.

Not only is all of this true as between one community and another, but it is just as true between one class of our citizens and another. Now and then we meet well-meaning people who have a genuine horror and dread of all rich men and think of them as being set apart by peculiar vice and iniquity. Now and then we meet equally well-meaning rich men who have an equally irrational dread of those whom they style "labor leaders." In each case I think the hostility is in large part due to a want of sympathy caused by complete ignorance of the men who arouse such distrust or anger. As a matter of fact, if we take a given number of men of large fortune and a like number of wage-workers, we find that in their essential human nature they are all alike. In each group we find men as wise and as foolish, as good and as bad as in the other group. Such being the case it is certainly well that, so far as possible, when the men of a given group, as a whole, act in a way that we deem contrary to the public interest, we should treat the action as a wrong to be remedied rather than as a wrong to be avenged. We ought not to tolerate wrong. It is a sign of weakness to do so, and in its ultimate effects weakness is often quite as bad as wickedness. But in putting a stop to the wrong we should, so far as possible, avoid getting into an attitude of vindictive hatred toward the wrongdoer. He may be morally to blame and it may necessary to punish him; but on the other hand the wrong he has committed may simply be due to the existing condition of things, to conditions under which he has been brought up, and in such a case, while we must apply the remedy, and see that there is no further chance of harm to the community, it is neither just nor farsighted to exact revenge for what has been done. In short, friends, let us realize that in very truth we are knit together in ties of brotherhood, and that while it is proper and necessary that we should insist upon our rights, we should yet be patient and considerate in bearing with one another, and in trying, so far as in us lies, each to look at the problems that face us from his brother's standpoint as well as from his own.

Depreciates Child Labor.

It is a matter for congratulation that there is such a steady increase of interest in the southern states in everything pertaining to children. This has already markedly shown itself, and I hope will still more markedly show itself in the future, in warring against the evil of child labor in factories. The factory is a very poor place indeed for a child; indeed, personally I think the factory a poor place for a woman—certainly for a married woman, or for an unmarried woman for more than a very few years. In any community organized on really healthy lines the average woman will have quite enough to do in her own home, whether she is rich or poor; and nowhere else can she do work of such value to the nation as a whole—and by work, I mean her housework, her work as housewife and mother and not so-called "home industries." As regards children, it is as essential to look after their physical as their mental training. We can not afford to let children grow up ignorant; and if they are sent to school they can not, while young, also work hard outside without detriment, physical, mental, and moral. There is urgent need for the health authorities to increase their care over the hygienic conditions and surroundings of children of tender years, and especially to supervise those in the schools. It is a good thing to try to reform bad children, to try to build up degenerate children; but it is an even better thing to try to keep healthy in soul, body, and mind these children who are now sound but who may easily grow up unsound if no care is taken of them. The nation's most valuable asset is the children; for the children are the nation of the future. All people alive to the nation's need should join together to work for the moral, spiritual and physical welfare of the children in all parts of our land. I am glad that there has been founded a national society of public school hygiene, and I wish it, and all its branches, well in every way.

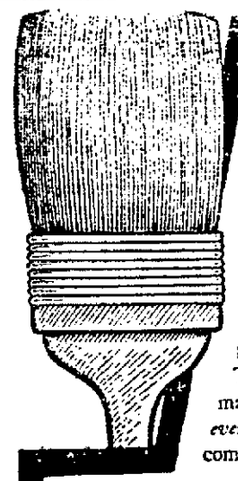

Government Should Safeguard.

There is increasing need that the welfare of the children should be effectively safeguarded by governmental action; with the proviso, however, that this action shall be taken with knowledge and in a spirit of robust common sense; for philanthropy, whether governmental or individual, is a curse and not a blessing when marked by a spirit of foolish sentimentality and ignorance. Such governmental action is merely one inevitable result of the ever-increasing growth of our complex industrialism. Decade by decade, it becomes more and more necessary that, without sacrificing their individual independence, the people of this country shall recognize in more effective form their mutual interdependence, and the duty of safeguarding the interest of each in the ultimate interest of all. We have inherited and developed a superbly self-reliant individualism in this country. I most earnestly hope that it will not be lost, that it will never be exchanged for a deadening socialism. The only permanently beneficial way in which to help anyone is to help him to help himself; if either private charity, or governmental action, or any form of social expression destroys the individual's power of self help, the gravest possible wrong is really done to the individual. Nevertheless, as the conditions of life grow more complex, it is not possible to trust our welfare only to the unbridled individual initiative of each unit of our population working as that unit wills. We need laws for the care of our children which were not needed when this country was in its infancy. We need laws for the control of vast corporations such as were not needed when the individual fortunes were far smaller than at present, and when these fortunes were not combined for business use. In the same way we need to change our attitude toward labor problems from what that attitude was in the days when the great bulk of our people lived in the country with no more complex labor relations than is implied in the connection between the farmer and the hired help.

PIANOLA

Without Thinking Twice About the Cost.

Only $15 Down and $7 a Month.

It seems a very small price to pay—$7 a month—when you consider that the Pianola will be paying daily dividends in pleasure—not only to yourself but to your entire family. The ownership of a Pianola is a perpetual admission ticket to the entire realm of music, light and classic, popular and religious.

The "Model K" Pianola, on which these unprecedentedly easy terms are quoted, is made by the Aeolian Company, and is a genuine Pianola, recognized throughout the world as the standard Piano-player. It also includes the famous Metrostyle, which was originally obtainable only in our $300 models. The "Model K" Pianola with its exclusive features is therefore easily the superior of any of the other Piano-players no matter at what price sold.

In Ebony the "Model K" Pianola costs $215, or in Mahogany, Walnut or Oak, $225. Immediate possession is given upon a down payment of $15 with subsequent payments of $7 a month and simple interests on the unpaid balance.

WHEN COMP'NY COMES.

Once Mr. Robson come to visit us,
En mamma says, "Now we won't make a fuss
Like you was comp'ny, but I'm most afraid
You'll git no dinner 'less'n I help the maid."
En I said, "Mamma, what's a maid?" but mamma, she Just hurried out en didn't answer me.

En, dinner time, the spoons was just as shiny!
En we et off the plates that's made in Chiny.
Like it was Sunday. En Blossom, she says, "Oo!
There's olives en there's pickled peaches, too;
Oo, goody!" En I says: "There's lemonade
Out in the kitchen. Papa, what's a maid?"
But papa he pertended like that he
Was busy, en he didn't answer me.

En we et up the soup that Annie brought,
En Mr. Robson made a weeny spot
Right on the cloth, en I says, "Sloppy slop!"
Like papa says to me 'fever I drop
Things on the table. En pa says, "My dear!"
But didn't say it lovin'. Sounded queer
En most like things you hadn't ought to say.
En Blossom says: "We got ice cream today.
The man just brought it. I heard mamma phone
When she was in the libr'y all alone."

En I says: "Mamma, is there macaroons?
En why has Mr. Robson got three spoons
To his place—two that auntie sent
To me en Bles? En this one I got's bent!"
En then he laughed, en so I wasn't 'fraid
Of him no more, en ast him, "What's a maid?"

En mamma spoke up quick en says: "My dear,
I never saw you talk en act so queer.
You know it's Annie! Now do keep your seat
En don't you say another word, but eat!"
En Blossom says: "Don't eat too much, becuz
There's best things for dessert that ever wuz.
There's fruit en nuts en funny lemonade!"

En papa said that children once was made
To 'have themselves, but Mr. Robson smiled
En said he only wished he had a child
Like us. En I said, "Well, why ain't you got One then?" En jus' then Annie brought
The ice cream en dessert, en it was nice,
En me en Blossom had another slice.

En Annie brought the funny lemonade
In bowls. En I says: "Annie, you're a maid!
En Mr. Robson knows you are, because
We all heard mamma say it twicet you was."

A Remittance.

A southern lawyer tells of a judge in Arkansas who had several "tiffs" with a lawyer retained by a woman who had instituted a breach of promise suit in the court presided over by the judge in question.

After each exchange of repartee between his honor and the imprudent counsel, the judge would say:

"Clerk, just enter another fine of $10 against Mr. Mitchell for contempt of court."

When this sort of thing had proceeded further than counsel wished, he addressed his honor in this wise:

"If your honor please, I am a good citizen and as such intend to obey the orders of the honorable court in this as in all other instances. Now, your honor, it so happens that I have not about me the sum of $30, for which I have been mulcted for contempt. Therefore I shall be compelled to borrow such sum from some friend, and I see no one present whose friendship I have enjoyed so much as your honor's. So I make no hesitation in approaching your honor for a loan to square the fines assessed against me."

With just the faintest smile about his lips, his honor looked first at counsel and then at the clerk.

"Clerk," said he at last, "remit Mr. Mitchell's fines. The state is better able than I to lose $30."—Harper's Weekly.

That Hungry Feeling.

"I put my feelings into this picture," said the poor but proud artist.

$16.85

For choice of 20 different styles Drop End Davenports or Divans

That's a very special offering because each and every one is worth from $30 to $35, being manufacturer's samples or models.

$13.85 Buys this Combination Bookcase and Writing Desk

First of all it is solid oak; then remember it has bent glass ends, and furthermore it has three drawers. Need we add it is worth $25.

$1.10 Ladies' Rocker

Suitable for porch, sewing or kitchen, made of maple, natural color, with strong, serviceable rush seat, worth $2.

$22.85 For Fine Sideboard

Golden Oak, polished, that's like your piano; it is complete, too, with fine French plate mirror, and there isn't another store within the range of the largest gun on the biggest war vessel that would duplicate it under $30.

$17.85 For Handsome Chiffonier

To say it is worth $25 is making a statement rather mild; besides, there is a choice of either mahogany or bird's-eye maple, and the easiest sort of terms.

$1.98 for Gasoline Stove

Worth $3 and many folks say one is worth its weight in gold. Guess if you could not buy another you wouldn't take 10 times the price for yours.

PEKIN TO PARIS RACE STARTS.

HAD EXCITING VOYAGE.

Steamer Wyneric Attacked by Revolutionists in Guayaquil.

Victoria, B. C., June 10—The steamer Wyneric, Captain Dent, arrived yesterday after an exciting voyage of twenty-two days from Guayaquil.

Captain Dent had some exciting experiences while his vessel was at Guayaquil, being attacked while in a cafe by revolutionists. In company with an American, who is in business at that port, he was dining at a cafe when a number of revolutionists swept the dishes from the table and attacked the two foreigners with sticks. Captain Dent and his companion drew their revolvers and took a stand against the wall of the cafe, a number of foreigners ultimately coming to their assistance. The police, who were summoned, joined issues with the revolutionists, demanding that the foreigners accompany them to police headquarters. The other foreigners assisted them to beat back all their assailants, who eventually retired, leaving the foreigners in possession of the wrecked cafe.

TROOPS GUARDING A TOWN.

Friends of Men Shot by Saloonist Threaten to Burn Saloon.

Parker, Col., June 10.—Fearing an attempt to burn the saloon of L. F. Lambert, which probably would result in the destruction of the entire town, Parker is under guard night and day. A squad of soldiers from Fort Logan is patrolling the main street and outskirts and the townspeople are in a state of terror.

Lambert "short-changed" a soldier Friday night, it is alleged, and when the latter protested, emptied his revolver into a squad of twenty, injuring two so badly that their lives were despaired of for a time. He escaped after the shooting and friends of the wounded men have vowed they will get vengeance by burning the building.

Yesterday an ineffectual attempt was made to fire the place. It alarmed the people of the town and as a result of their request for protection troops were dispatched from Fort Logan.

Intense feeling prevails against Lambert. He has not been captured, although the sheriff's deputies have trailed him to Denver.

Look in our window and see the $30, $32 and $35 Hart, Schaffner & Marx suits that we placed on sale today at $25.

It Would Be Simple.

In the days before the dawn of his fame it was the practice of a certain well known author to wander up and down the land seeking what he might devour in the way of suggestion and local color. In this way he had drifted down into Arkansas, "roughing it" and not, as he expresses it, presenting an appearance calculated to inspire a hotel proprietor with unlimited confidence.

The only hotel in the town, a frame structure, seemed to have been built upon the theory that there was plenty of room straight up, but that ground had to be bought, and the wanderer was shown to a room on the third floor, reached through many narrow and winding passages. From the one window it was a straight drop to the ground.

"Say, how would I get out of this place in case of fire?" he asked the landlord, who had brought up his grip.

The other eyed him coldly.

"Waal," he drawled, "all yo' would have to do would be to show the night watchman—the one with the shotgun—a receipted bill foh yo' board an' lodgin' an' get him to tie up the bulldog."—Harper's Weekly.

Nothing Doing.

"Wouldn't it be great if yer could git all de grub yer wanted by turnin' a crank?"

"I dunno. Who'd turn de crank?"—Once a Week.

Results.

"Can that author show any results that are amusing or instructive?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "some of the criticisms of his work are very entertaining indeed."—Washington Star.

You Know Them.

"Is that a new hobby he is riding?"

"No; same old frayed horse. It's the new bit and blind bridle that attract attention."—Atlanta Constitution.

How Pa Fixed the Lawn Mower.

We got our old lawn mower out,
But it would hardly run a bit.
"We'll have to get it fixed," says ma,
But pa says, "I can tinker it;
It's wasteful, this extravagance.
So get some oil, a wrench, a file;
I'll fix it up the same as new
In only just a little while."

"Be keerful, Si," says ma, but pa
Jest looked at her and kinder sniffed.
"I know what I'm about," says he,
"At fixin' things I got a gift.
You just take Tommy off to church,
And when you're home again you'll see
That I can do things mighty well
When no one's by to pester me."

I begged to stay a-helpin' pa
Because I like to hear 'im cuss.
But had to go to Sunday school
And couldn't wait to see the muss.
I couldn't stay there, though, but sneaked
Away and run for home like Ned.
I didn't dare go in, but peeked
At pa from round behind the shed.

And there was pa—his Sunday pants
Looked like he'd taken them to wipe
A engine with; he'd tore his shirt
And bit the stem clean off his pipe;
He kicked the thing an' hurt his corn.
Then run and got the ax, and—wow!
When he got through he grinned and yelled,
"Doggone you, guess I've fixed you now!"

KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Indianapolis, June 10.—Vance Hunt, a timekeeper, employed at a construction camp on the Vandalia railroad near Eagle Creek, west of the city, was struck by a train and instantly killed this morning. Nearly every bone in the man's body was broken.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., June 10.—The wheat market today opened active and firm, although the general run of prices was somewhat unsettled. It was generally believed, however, that the government crop report which was expected this afternoon would be of a bullish character and the bulk of traders guided themselves accordingly. September opened ½c to ⅝c higher at 99½c to 99¾c, sold at 99¾c, advanced to 99¾c and then sold at 99⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 567 cars.

Prices dropped about 1c on the publication of the government crop report, which was construed as being bearish. The close was weak with September off 1@1¼c at 98¾@98⅝c.

The corn market was firm because of steady cables and continued reports of cold weather in the corn belt. September opened ⅜c to ½c higher at 54⅛c to 54⅜c, sold at 54½c and then at 54¼c. Local receipts were 937 cars with 453 of contract grade.

The close was easy with September down ⅛@¼c at 53⅜@53⅝c.

Trading in oats was fairly active and prices were firm. September opened unchanged to ⅝c higher at 35c to 35⅜c and for a time held at the latter figure.

The provision market was quiet and prices were easy. September pork opened 7½c lower at $16.45. Lard was down 2½c at $9.17½. Ribs were off 2½c at $8.92½.

The Close.

The prices at the close were as follows:

Wheat—July, 95¾@95⅞c; September, 98¼@98⅜c.

Corn—July, 53¾c; September, 53¾@53⅞c.

Oats—July, 65½c; September, 37½c.

Pork—July, $16.22½; September, $16.37½.

Lard—July, $8.90@8.92½; September, $9.07½@9.10.

Ribs—July, $8.70@8.72½; September, $8.87½.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, June 10.—The opening business in the stock market was scanty, small advances were the rule but there was a sprinkling of losses including some of the prominent stocks. Great Northern preferred advanced 1½ points and then reacted a point. Union Pacific rose ⅜.

Buying orders were distributed freely and prices rose sharply with the general railroad list in better inquiry and relatively stronger than the industrials. After the standard railroad stocks had an average rise of a point, heavy selling orders of Union Pacific broke it a fraction below Saturday's closing and started realizing in other stocks which wiped out a good part of the advance. The earlier gains were changed as a result of the small losses in the course of the filling orders to sell. Activity subsided greatly at the recessions, but there were no important rallies. Bonds were firm.

The selling was not continued beyond midday and the market became steadier, but almost stagnant. American Car sagged a point.

Signs of improvement developed toward the close of the hour and of the period for the appearance of the government crop report. Tennessee Coal moved up a point while United States Pipe declined as much.

The market closed easy with many stocks at the lowest. Prices jumped to the top level of the day after the appearance of the government crop report, but the rally did not hold. Pennsylvania was forced 1¼ and Union Pacific and Smelting 1 under Saturday's closing on the reaction. American Malting sold at a decline of 2½ points.

TRAIN BANDIT SHOT.

Wyoming Posse Gets Man Concerned in Hold-Up.

Sheridan, Wyo., June 10.—While pursuing two Montana horse thieves yesterday, Sheriff Guy and a posse from Johnson county, shot and killed one of the robbers that held up a Northern Pacific passenger train at Welch spur recently. The man was cornered and shot on what is known as the "O. W." ranch, forty miles southeast of Sheridan. The second man escaped but the posse is still in pursuit. It is believed he will be captured or shot today.

MINEWORKERS IN SESSION.

Men of Alabama District in Annual Convention.

Birmingham, Ala., June 10.—The tenth annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America, District No. 20, Alabama, began here today with about seventy-five delegates present. Reports of officers show that the present membership in this state is 3,960, as compared to 11,487 in 1904. "This decrease is accounted for," says the report of Secretary J. L. Clemo, "by the number of local unions that were on strike during that period and up to this time we have not been able to reinstate them."

TO PRISON FOR LIFE.

Sentence Passed on Mrs. Lawson at Lafayette for Killing Husband.

Lafayette, Ind., June 10.—Alice Cooper Lawson was sentenced to the Indiana Woman's prison for life this morning by Judge Dehart in the circuit court. Charles A. Lawson, a saloon keeper, was killed by his wife last September.

RETIRES FROM MILL BUSINESS.

City Clerk Peters, of Monroeville, was in the city today on business. Mr. Peters recently disposed of his milling and elevator property at that place and will retire from the activities of business duties for a while at least. By his honest dealings and attention to business principles he enjoyed a large trade, much of the product of his mill and elevator reaching the markets of this city, as well as all the sister cities of Monroeville. Previous to his entering the milling business Mr. Peters was one of the leading teachers of the county and was for many years the special Monroeville correspondent of The Sentinel.

MERCHANTS' INSURANCE.

Thomas McKiernan, representing the Fort Wayne Retail Merchants' association, went to Anderson today to aid in completing arrangements for the launching of the Indiana Retail Merchants' Mutual Fire Insurance company. It is expected that the policies of the new organization will become effective July 1, and it is estimated that Fort Wayne dealers will carry insurance in the company to the extent of from $75,000 to $80,000.

JOHN HUGHES HERE.

Business Agent of Moulders Drops in to See the Men.

John Hughes, business agent of the Moulders' union, arrived in the city at noon today and will remain here until late tonight or tomorrow morning. Mr. Hughes has been in Kendallville, where there was a prosperous union before the only important foundry in the city burned down, and he dropped off here, as he said, on his way to Indianapolis to look into the situation. "I have seen only a few of the men who are on strike," said he to a Sentinel representative, "since my arrival and of course am not thoroughly informed as to the situation. From what I have heard, however, I believe the situation is practically unchanged. We have received no proposition looking to a settlement from Mr. Bass and the strikers are as firm as ever." When asked if he expected a change soon, Mr. Hughes said that he had no advices that would justify such an opinion. News of the arrival of Mr. Hughes was rapidly spread among the strikers and a meeting will be held and addressed by him late this afternoon or tonight. All was quiet at the foundry today. The men received their wages and with few exceptions returned to their duties in the shops. The exceptions were those of eight or ten of the new moulders, who ordered cabs and drove away, evidently to the show grounds. At the foundry office it was stated that two of the strikers had returned to their old position, one last Thursday and the other this morning. Superintendent Fisher could not recall the names when he was talking to the reporter.

Peter Bopp, oil distributor at the Pennsylvania roundhouse, had an eye injured by a scale of iron which flew off a hoop he was driving upon a barrel. The metal was removed from the optic by Dr. Frank Markey and the patient was soon resting easy.

LARGEST ORDER FOR CARS.

Contracts Aggregating $6,500,000 Placed in Forty-eight Hours.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 10.—Contracts for the construction of 6.000 steel cars aggregating in cost $6,500,000, have been placed within the past forty-eight hours by the United States Steel corporation. This is one of the largest orders for steel products and the largest for steel cars that has been placed since steel car construction has been an industry of the Pittsburg district. To fill the orders about 90,000 tons of steel plates will be required. Nearly one half of the contracts have been placed with Pittsburg builders.

W. W. TODD TAKEN ILL.

W. W. Todd, chief car inspector of the Pennsylvania Northwest system, was taken violently ill while in the Wayne club yesterday and was conveyed to St. Joseph hospital in an unconscious condition. Physicians were able to resuscitate him in a short time and this morning he arose from his bed and dressed himself, though he was too weak to come down to the railway offices. His condition is not such as to give alarm. Mr. Todd came to Fort Wayne with F. D. Casanave in 1882 and has been here ever since, though he has passed through several promotions since his arrival.

WILL CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen will be thirteen years old next Thursday and the anniversary is to be observed in appropriate manner. Invitations have been issued to the auxiliaries in all of the cities within a radius of 150 miles and most of them are expected to respond. There will be an afternoon meeting for the initiation of some applicants and the exemplification of the degrees, and in the evening there will be a reception at Hibernian hall in honor of the visitors. The drill team and the officers of the lodge will meet at Hibernian hall Tuesday afternoon for practice.

NEW ENGINES ARRIVING.

Passenger engines 10 and 11, built by the American Locomotive works at Pittsburg for the Grand Rapids and Indiana company, arrived here yesterday and two more, Nos. 12 and 101 will arrive this afternoon or tonight. As rapidly as they can be broke in, these new engines will be put in service on the southern division of the G. R. & I. They are known as the GGG4 type and are heavier and have some improvements over the engines now in service on the line.

SPRAINED BOTH ANKLES.

W. S. Hostetter, an engine inspector at the Pennsylvania round house, fell from the running board of an engine yesterday, alighting upon his feet on the brick floor. Both ankles were painfully sprained and he had difficulty in getting to his home on Hanna street.

BITTEN BY A DOG.

H. E. Lonergan, a painter at the Pennsylvania shops, will not be able to work for a few days on account of injuries inflicted by a vicious bull dog yesterday. The canine was getting the best of a dog in which Mr. Lonergan was interested and he tried to separate them. The bull dog turned upon him and bit him in the leg and one hand.

PENNSY BOYS WON.

In the ball game at the Corner Rod and Gun club grounds Saturday afternoon between the Pennsylvania and the Bowser teams, the former won by a score of 9 to 1. McCarthy and Romary composed the battery for the Pennsylvanias, and Casey, Schroeder and Luley composed the battery for the Bowsers.

STUDY CLUB MEETING.

Mrs. Banner Fullerton will entertain the Study club Thursday afternoon and it is desired that all members will be present. The Study club is composed of members of the Grand International auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Louis C. Eckerle is a new employe at the Pennsylvania shop power plant.

C. T. Whitney, an apprentice, resumed his duties at the Pennsylvania machine shop this morning.

G. Nulf, a yard fireman for the Pennsylvania, is attending a family reunion in the country today.

George Rupley, machinist, who had a foot hurt a week ago, resumed work at the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

Division Operator Homer Reynolds, of the Pennsylvania, has just received from the kennels a magnificent Scotch Collie.

H. L. Lanoir, a painter at the Pennsylvania shops, has gone to Chicago to attend the wedding of his brother.

P. F. Landy, a gang foreman at the Pennsylvania erecting shop, has been summoned out of the city on business which will occupy his attention a day or two.

Division Storekeeper C. P. Cherry, of the Pennsylvania, went to Chicago on business for the company this morning.

After a week at Lake James, John Beyerlein, a painter, returned to his duties at the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

T. E. Reardon, an engine inspector at the Pennsylvania round house, has gone to Chicago for a three or four days' visit.

Foreman G. A. Szink, of the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, has gone to Columbus, Ohio, on business for the company.

A. Sheets resigned a position at the Pennsylvania round house this morning and will go west. He has been ill with diptheria for several weeks.

The Navahoe club, which is composed chiefly of Wabash employes, will give a dance at Robison park Wednesday evening. There will be fifteen couples.

The largest bass caught at Rome City yesterday weighed exactly five and a half pounds. It was caught by "Jack" Dickens, a draughtsman at the Bass works.

Engineers C. A. Welsh, C. C. Ellenwood, J. Q. McClellan, C. Sweeny and A. M. Slagle and Fireman H. E. Koenig, of the Pennsylvania, are sick and off duty.

S. H. Johnson, checkman at the Wabash freight house, was called to Churubusco yesterday by a message stating that his father was lying at the point of death.

The Switchmen's union will have a meeting this evening. W. H. Hays, who represented the local at the convention in Detroit, will make his report at this meeting.

Charles Stephan, foreman of the lathe department of the Pennsylvania shops, is sick and off duty. W. H. Miller and Dennis O'Conner, shopmen, are also sick and off duty.

Next week Mr. and Mrs. William Madara will visit relatives at Altoona and Tyron, Pa., where they formerly resided. Mr. Madara is a machinist in the Pennsylvania shops.

Machinist Michael Poulsin, of the Pennsylvania round house, has gone to Bawbees lake to spend a week. He has spent a week each year at that resort for a good many years.

F. C. Schultz, of the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, and his wife are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kissinger, of Edgerton, Ohio, who arrived here Saturday. Mr. Kissinger is a prominent farmer.

Charles Miller has completed his first year's term at the Purdue university and has returned here to work as a fireman on the Pennsylvania road until the opening of the school season next fall.

J. Zurbe is a new laborer at the Pennsylvania round house. J. D. Knotte resigned a position at the round house to take a position in the maintenance of way department as a track inspector.

George W. Bearinger, checkman at the Wabash freight house, had the tip of the middle finger of his right hand crushed off under a box Saturday afternoon. Dr. Kaadt, the company's surgeon, attended the unfortunate man.

Thomas Shovlin, in the C meter room; F. Walburn, in the transformer room, and Ross Hindman, in the wiring department, are new men at the Electric works, and George Moore, of the meter department, resigned this morning.

V. J. Jones, a machinist, has been transferred from the Altoona to the Fort Wayne shops of the Pennsylvania. He is a Fort Wayne boy, his father being the late Engineer Robert Jones, who was fatally injured at Valparaiso several years ago.

The employes in the Pennsylvania erecting shop were put upon an eight hour work day schedule this morning. The men will commence work at 7 and quit at 4 o'clock. The change is only temporary and may be followed in a few days by a resumption of full time.

The steam roads of Fort Wayne carried a good many excursionists yesterday. Nearly 800 went to Rome City, 391 to Indianapolis, 150 to the lakes on the Lake Shore line, 105 to Toledo and 653 came in the city over the Wabash from Danville and intermediate points.

A fire in the dry kiln and store house at the Lake Shore shops in Elkhart yesterday afternoon destroyed property valued at upwards of $20,000. Many valuable patterns were destroyed. The fire is believed to have been started from a cigar stub carelessly thrown by a smoker.

A supposed slight injury to one of the eyes of John Brown, waterworks superintendent of the Wabash, a week or two ago, has developed into an affection which threatens serious consequences. He has placed himself in the hands of the company's oculist, who says that careful treatment will save the optic.

Ed Mennewisch, late of the Western Gas works, has taken a position as blacksmiths helper in the Wabash shops. Noah Herzog, a machinists' helper, also took a position at the Wabash shops this morning. J. M. Whalen, stationary fireman, and E. J. Girard, blacksmiths' helper, resigned positions at those shops this morning.

The office of Master Car Builder J. A. Graham, of the Pennsylvania, is receiving attention from the painters and will soon present a pretty appearance. The reader will probably remember that the interior of the office was filled with scalding steam several hours one night recently and the greater portion of the varnish and paint was removed from the furniture, walls and ceiling.

Pat Daly, who has been engaged by the government as a mail weigher for the past three or four weeks, running in and out of Marion, Ohio, is visiting his Fort Wayne friends. He has completed his work for the government and will resume a clerical position at Hamilton, Ind., with the Wabash company. Mr. Daly was assistant cashier of the Wabash freight house for several months a year or two ago.

MUCH RAW MATERIAL COMES.

Records in Iron and Steel Industry Are Broken.

New York, June 10.—While the exports of finished iron and steel last month were the smallest for any one month in the last decade, the imports of raw material were the largest in any thirty days in the history of the trade. The May arrivals at New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore reached a total of nearly 250,000 tons. Compared with the previous month, the heaviest increases were made in pig iron, which showed a gain of nearly 80 per cent.

The iron ore imports by themselves also reached record breaking figures. In addition to the usual Cuban shipments, heavy cargoes arrived from Russia, North Africa, Spain, Greece and Sweeden.

The American demand for pig iron is so unprecedented that the stocks of the material lying in British warehouses are smaller than they have ever been before.

MEAT PRICES ADVANCE.

Scarcity of Supply Given as Cause by Packers.

The price of beef meats were advanced all over the city this morning from one to two cents, depending on the quality. The price to the retailers has been increased $1 per hundred pounds by the big packers, who assign the scarcity as the cause of the boost in price. The act of the packers by which the producer is made to bear the loss of all condemned meat has kept inferior qualities out of the market, and the apparent scarcity of the better grades, which is only an increased demand since consumers are unable to obtain low priced beef, is the real cause of the advance. The local retailers say they are unable to pay the higher prices without an increase to their customers, as the margin before was very small.

CAR LOAD OF BUTTER.

The largest consignment of butter ever shipped from this city was sent to New York Saturday by Howenstein and Crouse, commission merchants. The shipment contained 18,000 pounds, was sent in a special car over the Nickel Plate, and represented the receipts for one week at the commission house. The product was purchased from the farmers at a price ranging from 15 to 17 cents. The ease of access to the Fort Wayne markets since the building of the interurban lines is in a large measure the cause of the increased business.

OKLAHOMA PRIMARIES.

Guthrie, Okla., June 10.—In the democratic primaries C. N. Haskell, of Muskogee, I. T., for governor, has received a majority of 14,000 over Lee Cruce, of Ardmore, and R. L. Owen, of MusKogee and Roy V. Hoffman, of Chandler, have been nominated for United States senators by majorities ranging from 6,000 to 8,000.

CITY BREVITIES.

Soi D. Bayless lodge, F. and A. M., at the meeting tonight will confer the entered apprentice degree.

Melvin Mertz, of Columbia City, and Paul Renner, of Angola, have been enlisted at the marine recruiting office by Sergeant Baughner. The boys will be sent to Washington.

Miss Lola Robertson, of Pawpaw, Mich., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robertson, of 218 Baker street. Miss Robertson is conducting a millinery store at Pawpaw and is well known here.

The Ladies' Missionary society of Bethel Evangelical church will meet this evening with Mrs. J. E. Peterson, 2329 Lafayette street.

Finance Clerk W. J. Hess, of the postoffice, has returned from a visit at Andrews.

Jacob Miller has arrived from Switzerland to make his home with his uncle, Andrew Vogeley.

Postmaster Hanna has received official notification of the advance in salary to be granted July 1 to all rural mail carriers, who will be advanced from $720 to $900 per annum.

TRACTION COMPANY FILES BIG MORTGAGE ON PROPERTY

Lima and Toledo Road Prepares for Extensions —The Courts.

The Lima and Toledo Traction company filed with the county recorder today a mortgage for two and a half millions, covering all of its Indiana and Ohio property and the instrument states that the object is to take up outstanding indebtedness and to pay for extensions and improvements.

The document is a bulky one and provides for the issuance of 5 per cent. gold bonds of the denomination of $1,000 and the Provident Life and Trust company, of Philadelphia, is made the trustee.

Reiter Will Is Probated.

Under the will of the late George Reiter, which was offered for probate in the circuit court today, George W. Reiter, one of his sons, is bequeathed jointly with his wife, the family home in Homboldt, Kan., along with $500. Winfield Scott Reiter is to receive $500 and Richard H. Barcus, a son-in-law, gets an equal sum. The residue of the estate is to go to the grandchildren. The will was drawn March 7, 1907.

The will of Daniel O'Grady was also probated and his property is to be divided equally between his widow, Catherine O'Grady, and his sons, Morris, Daniel and John Edward O'Grady.

Pleasant Township In.

Tax payers from Pleasant township were given a hearing before the county board of review today and there were enough in town to give the members a hard day's work.

Court Notes.

The $5,000 damage suit of Joseph Begue against the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Traction company has been dismissed.

Louise Miller was granted a divorce in the circuit court from William Miller and restored to her maiden name of Underwood.

Augusta Holbrock has sued William Holbrock for divorce. They were married Dec. 6, 1903, and she charges that he called her bad names and deserted her in August, 1905. P. B. Colerick is her attorney.

Ollie Vaughn and Milton Brumbaugh, who were in the city court this morning and placed in charge of the juvenile officer, had their cases dismissed. Both will go to their homes.

CITY BREVITIES.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hanan and Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Ganiard, of Lagrange, are in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cook leave tomorow for Purdue university, where their son, Hary Cook, is a member of the graduating class.

John Morris has returned from a professional trip to Chicago.

The ladies of the home missionary society of St. John's Lutheran church will meet Wednesday afternoon at the church parlors, Mrs. Deter entertaining.

The young people's society of Grace Reformed church will hold its monthly business meeting in the lecture rooms of the church tomorow evening.

There will be omission of the regular evening services at the Rescue home mission, on East Columbia street this evening. The purpose is to give the rooms a renovating. Services will be resumed tomorrow evening.

WILL GO TO KENDALLVILLE.

One Hundred Newsboys to Make the Trip Friday Evening.

Charles A. Phelps, president of the Fort Wayne Newsboys' union, is completing arrangements to take the one hundred members of the union and the Newsboys' band to Kendallville next Friday evening, where they will be the guests of Mrs. F. B. Perkins and the Kendallville newsboys. The Fort Wayne newsboys will be given a warm welcome, as extensive arrangements have been made for their reception. John E. Gunkel, of Toledo, president of the National Newsboys' association, will be present, and invitations have been sent to the mayors of Kendallville, Fort Wayne, Garrett and Auburn to attend. Addresses will be made by Mr. Gunkle, Mr. Phelps and others. The Fort Wayne newsboys will have a special meeting Thursday evening to complete arrangements for the trip.

SHERIFF FOLLOWS MANY WILD RUMORS AND IS AT SEA

Nothing Developed to Give Him Clue in Woodburn Case.

Sheriff Grice spent most of the day yesterday at Woodburn and was chased from pillar to post by wild rumors that proved to be of no value when run down in developing any information that might reveal the identity of the murderers of Marshal Columbus Croy early Friday morning.

Stories of suspicious characters, rumors of significant remarks made by people in the community and reports that it was believed might help in the matter of unraveling the mystery were followed and found to have no foundation in fact and the sheriff returned last night with nothing more than he had known from the time he finished his first investigation.

Funeral Largely Attended.

The funeral of Columbus Croy was largely attended and was a tribute to the high respect in which he was held in the community. Services were under the direction of the Fort Wayne Aerie of Eagles and were conducted by Attorney John W. Eggeman and John N. Pfeiffer, president and chaplain of the order. Interment followed at New Haven.

Musical selections were rendered by Mrs. S. C. Moffat and Mrs. William Miles and a number of the members were present and accompanied the body to New Haven.

Kreuger In Custody.

The story of the suspicious actions of a man with a hair lip led yesterday to the arrest of Robert Kreuger, of 3401 South Barr street. Sheriff Grice said this morning the man was at police headquarters here Thursday night and stated he had nothing to hold him on and would probably release him during the day.

He is the man who inquired of William Wearley the address of the town marshal, but says he was making his way from Fort Wayne to Cecil, Ohio, where he had been working, to get some clothing and simply wanted a place to sleep. This was on Tuesday night and he remained in a box car all night. He made his way to Cecil and back by Thursday afternoon and worked for the crew of the local freight for a ride to Fort Wayne. His story appears to be all right and as the sheriff has been unable to connect the man with the crime he will order his release some time during the day.

THE DEATHS.

KICKLEY.

Mrs. Melissa Janes Kickley, wife of Joseph Kickley, and for many years a resident of this city, died at 10 o'clock Saturday night at the family home, 362 Baker street, at the age of 68 years.

Mrs. Kickley came to Allen county in 1861 from Chillicothe, O., and is survived by the husband and three children—Mrs. Ida Broom and Charles and Edward Kickley, all of this city. There are also three brothers, George Wait, of Antwerp, O.; Warren Wait, of Harlan, this county, and C. M. Wait, of Mount Victory, O.

Funeral services Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence under the auspices of the Degree of Rebekah and the Women's Relief Corps.

LECHNER.

Mrs. George Lechner, 44 years of age, died at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at her home twelve miles south of Fort Wayne, after an extended illness from cancer.

Mrs. Lechner was formerly Miss Lou Brading, of this city, and was a member of Hive No. 6, Ladies of the Maccabees. There are no surviving children. Funeral services Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock; interment at Ossian.

BRADLEY.

William J., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Bradley, of South Hoagland avenue, died at 8:15 o'clock Saturday evening from exhaustion at the age of seven days.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the residence.

ANDRES.

Cora Andres, 21 years of age, an inmate of the state school for feebleminded youth, died Saturday night from pulmonary tuberculosis.

The remains were shipped to Dupont, Ind., for interment.

MEYER.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meyer, of Center street, died at 4 o'clock this morning from exhaustion at the age of one day.

Funeral services were held this afternoon.

LUCE.

Mrs. Sarah A. Luce, widow of James H. Luce, died at 10 o'clock Sunday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. F. Nickell, 420 Washington boulevard west, at the age of 88 years.

Death was due to senility. Mrs. Luce is survived by ten children. The remains will be taken to Maumee, Ohio, for funeral service and interment.

LATONIA DERBY TODAY.

Eight Horses Will Contest for Trophy of Spring Meeting.

Cincinnati, O., June 10.—Eight three-year-olds will probably contest for the Latonia Derby at the opening of the spring meeting of the Latonia Jockey club this afternoon. The track will be heavy.

Ovelando will probably be made the favorite with Red Gauntlet second choice and The Abbott next in demand. There will also be a heavy play on Pink Star, who is considered to have a chance on a muddy track. The odds on the above named respectively are 3 to 1, 5 to 1, 6 to 1 and 15 to 1. There will be probably four other starters.

CATHEDRAL BOYS GRADUATE.

Will Present Comedy Entitled "Falsely Accused."

The annual commencement of the Cathedral Boys' high school will be held at Library hall Tuesday evening, June 18. A comedy in three acts entitled "Falsely Accused" will be presented in which about eighteen persons will have parts. Stephen A. Callahan is class valedictorian, and the Latin address will be given by Edward Perry. There are a large number of graduates.

DIRECT FOR CUBAN SERVICE.

Chester Bournes, Norman Pinney and Raymond Swartz, of Andrews, were enlisted at the army office today. A communication was received this morning by Sergeant Bennett authorizing him to enlist men for thirty days directly for Cuban service. The number of soldiers in the island is to be increased 2,000 at once. Heretofore a recruit has had to serve a number of months at home before he would be sent for foreign service.

WHEAT SHOWS FALLING OFF.

Government Bulletin Rates Condition of Spring Wheat at 88.7.

Washington, June 10.—Agricultural department's crop report issued today shows spring wheat condition on June 1, 1907, 88.7, compared with 93.4 at the corresponding date last year. Acreage sown in the United States, 1907: Spring wheat, 16,464,000; decrease of 1,242,000 or 7 per cent. as compared with last year. Winter wheat 77.4, compared with 82.2 on June 1, 1906.

Condition of barley 84.9 against 93.5 this time last year. Condition of rye 88.1, against 89.1 this time last year.

REVIVAL OF BOXERISM.

News Comes of Fresh Troubles In North of China.

Victoria, B. C., June 10.—The steamer Hellerophon yesterday brought news of a revival of boxerism in North China. Yuen Shih Kai's officials have arrested numerous Chinese recently for preaching and practicing boxerism and inducing natives to smear their door posts with blood on the assumption that this renders the occupants invulnerable when fighting.

Heavy loss of life is reported from Kellwin, Kwangsi, South China, as a result of the sudden subsidence of part of the large walled city. A large area of shops and dwellings collapsed and buried the places to the second story.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED.

No Futher News of Assassination of President of Guatemala.

New York, June 10.—Up to 10 o'clock this morning no confirmation had been received of the report that President Cabrera of Guatemala had been assassinated. This report came by way of Mexico last night.

Dr. Ramon Beagoechea, Guatamalan consul general at New York, cabled the minister of state at Guatemala City today for information.

DEPARTMENT STORE BULLETIN

SHOPMEN, ATTENTION!

BELOW WE HAND YOU A LIST OF GENUINE MONEY SAVERS. We ask you to compare them with what you are PAYING OTHERS. You will soon be convinced that the FRUIT HOUSE will save you at least 30 PER CENT. ON EVERY DOLLAR.

GUARANTEED LARD at LESS THAN 10c POUND; 5 pounds for 49c. This lard is equivalent to any 12½c to 15c lard in the city, so lay in your needs before our supply exhausts itself.

SPECIAL FLOUR at $1.09 PER 50-POUND BAG. This popular brand is certainly a bargain at above price, so you better include a sack when you leave your order.

GRANULATED SUGAR at $1.23 SK. No better quality of sugar is made than what we sell. You run no chances when you trade at the FRUIT HOUSE.

BEST QUALITY CRACKERS at 6c POUND. Just closed a contract for 100 more barrels, so help us keep the price down by cleaning up this big lot of crackers.

COUNTRY EGGS at 14c DOZEN. We will allow each customer 10 DOZEN, so don't ask for any more at this price. We want all our customers to get the benefit of this low price; consequently the limit of 10 dozen.

BREAKFAST BACON at 15½c POUND. Don't that price sound good after the advanced price others are charging?

REGULAR HAMS at 15c POUND. This is a chance that doesn't come every day, so lay in a supply at this low price.

SANTA CLAUS SOAPS at 10 BARS FOR 33c. Why pay more for soap when we sell it so cheap? Come in and get 10 CAKES during this sale at 33c.

LEMONS at 22c DOZEN. We just received 50 boxes nice large lemons and same will be sold at above price.

2D FLOOR—We now offer a 25 PER CENT. DISCOUNT from our established LOW PRICES on Ladies' Trimmed Hats. Beautiful Plumes, Flowers and Millinery goods. You cannot afford to miss these big discount sales.

3D FLOOR—Our Chinaware specials are the talk of the town. You should be interested in them, as nowhere in the city can you duplicate these specials.

ATTENTION, FARMERS! We quote you for this week the following prices, so bring your surplus to the FRUIT HOUSE: Strictly Fresh Laid Clean Eggs, 14c DOZEN; Nice Small Hens, 12c POUND; Fresh Churned Butter, 16c POUND, so come in and make the FRUIT HOUSE your trading place. We invite you to come and see us.

Popular With All

We wish to call your attention to our "Patented Braided Wire" Carpet Whip. It is the only whip or beater ever made on scientific principles. It will not cut or break the warp in rugs or carpets.

It covers more surface than any ever put upon the market, thus enabling one to go over rugs and carpets in about one-half the time it takes with the old-fashioned whips, for the dust and dirt will readily work off and out through the meshes of the whip instead of being held in. It also livens up the nap on rugs and carpets. Price, 15c and 25c. Try it and be convinced that it is the best whip you ever saw.
